STORMS LASH 12 STATES, 7 PEOPLE KILLED

SOUTHWEST, MIDWEST AND EAST ARE HIT

IN WESTERN SECTIONS STORMS BROUGHT SNOWS, RAINS, THREAT OF FLOODS

IN EASTERN PORTION GALES RIPPED OFF ROOFS AND UPROOTED TREES

(By United Press)

Loss of life and property damage were caused in a dozen states by storms which struck parts of the southwest, midwest and east.

Reports today indicated that at least seven persons, 5 of them children, had been killed.

In the western sections the storms brought snows, rain and the threat of floods. In the eastern portion most of the damage was caused by gales which ripped off roofs and uprooted trees.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., almost wiped out several times by tornadoes, reported 35 persons injured, and property damage estimated at more than $1,000,000 in that section.

Waterloo, Iowa, was isolated throughout Monday. So was Milwaukee because of one of the most severe sleet and hail storms in years which swept Wisconsin.

Telephone and telegraph companies estimated damage to lines in Wisconsin was in excess of $1,000,000.

At Green Bay, a city of 50,000, business was paralyzed. More than 17 inches of snow fell in 12 hours. The bay there rose five feet above normal and the Fox river overflowed both banks.

No milk was delivered in Green Bay from Saturday until today, highways being impassable.

The storm, whipping up 20 foot waves in Lake Michigan, swept across into Michigan even as far as Detroit. Ferry boat service across the Detroit river to Windsor was disrupted.

An uprooted tree crashed on the automobile of Louis Cornett at Newark, Ohio, killing him. At Belmore, Ohio, Loa Bacon, 15-year-old high school girl, was swept into the path of a machine by the wind and killed.

George Nohai, 28, of Peekskill, N. Y., was killed when a large maple tree, blown down by the high wind, crashed through the top of his automobile on the highway near Peekskill. Richard Salvatorio, Nohai's companion, was also badly crushed and is in Peekskill hospital in a critical condition.

New York, April 2.—April gales, cutting across the Atlantic seaboard from northern New York to West Virginia, have taken five lives.

In some places the wind reached a velocity of 72 miles an hour, carrying small buildings as far as 500 feet.

At Easton, Pa., Naomi Mallick, 7, was struck by a board and killed when wind tore off part of the roof at the Patterson township school house. Fifty other pupils escaped uninjured.

Charles Titman, a farmer living near Vail, N. J., and his daughter were killed when hit on the head by timber that the wind carried into the air after the Titman home collapsed.

Leo Grubka, a truck driver at Buffalo, N. Y., lost his life when a tree was blown down, striking his truck. Twelve other persons in the city were hurt.

Two children were killed in West Virginia, Margaret Beal, 10, dying from a crushed skull when wind tore out a window frame in a school house at Newell and hurled it against her head. The roof was blown off a home at Wilcoe and Wayne Brooks, one year old, was killed.

Chicago, April 2—"Long distance" telegraph service was resorted to today to carry United Press news to clients in the near northwest.

Minneapolis and St. Paul papers, ordinarily served over a wire about five hundred miles long, received telegraph news from Chicago over a wire which traced 4,000 miles.

American Telephone & Telegraph wires between Chicago and the Twin Cities were down, and the United Press wires were taken through to Denver, on to San Francisco, north through Portland, east to Helena, Mont., and back to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

St. Paul, April 2. — The United States weather bureau today promised a snow-blanketed northwest speedy relief from storms which began on Easter Sunday.

"Fair and warmer tonight and Wednesday" was the encouraging forecast issued today shortly before the temperature started a steady climb from the 26 degrees above zero mark.

NATIVE RUNNERS SEEKING AVIATORS LOST IN WILDS

Sydney, N. S. W., April 2.—(U.P.)—The primitive mode of man's travel and communication was pressed into service today in an effort to rescue the four crew members of the plane Southern Cross, exponents of man's latest achievement in the annihilation of space.

Native runners, little ark Bushmen of the wilds of northwestern Australia, were dispatched from Forrest River mission, near Wyndham, into the untracked and death infested jungles of the unexplored Drysdale river region where it is believed Captain Charles E. Kingsford-Smith and his companions were forced down last Sunday.

WILL STATE SECEDE FROM UNION ON THE PROHIBITION LAW?

WETS DECLARE VOTE ONLY AN EXPRESSION OF SENTIMENT

SEEK TO JOIN NEVADA, NEW YORK, MONTANA, MARYLAND TO END PROHIBITION

Madison, Wis., April 2.—(UP) — With repeal of the state prohibition law as an issue, Wisconsin went to the polls today.

Drys called the special vote a question of whether Wisconsin will "secede from the Union" over the prohibition law.

Wets said it was only an expression of sentiment—a joining with Nevada, New York, Montana and Maryland in a movement to end prohibition.

On the ballot, the question on which voters of the state will decide, reads:

"Shall the state prohibition enforcement act, generally known as the Severson act, be repealed?"

Result of the voting neither will repeal nor save the law. It merely is for the guidance of the legislature now in session here.

A second question on the ballot, overshadowed by the repeal fight and largely ignored by both sides, was that of amending the state dry act to remove penalties for making and selling beer.

Weather promised to be an influential if not deciding factor in determining the status of the dry law. The state was blanketed with snow yesterday, stopping all out door work and indicating a large vote in rural communities where, heretofore, drys have polled majorities.

On the other hand the snow has blocked highways in some districts which may keep many farmers from voting their convictions.

Should the drys win in the voting and the legislature pass a repeal law, Gov. Walter J. Kohler probably would find himself in an embarrassing position. He was elected last fall over LaFollette progressive forces by the paradoxical aid of Anti-Saloon League forces combined with the support of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

Friends of the governor in the senate where the resolution to submit the referendum won by a margin of two votes, were prepared to make a fight to hold up any legislation that may result from the vote and thus relieve the bathtub manufacturer-governor of embarrassment.

DUEL EXACTS 2 LIVES AS PISTOLS AND KNIVES FLASH

Scranton, Pa., April 2—(U.P.)—A duel, in which pistols and knives flashed, exacted two lives today, when Dominick Curcio, 32, and Nicholas Yanni, 29, ended an argument with violence.

Yanni shot Curcio through the heart. With eleven knife wounds in his body, Yanni dragged himself 50 feet from in front of the Curcio home, where the duel started, before he collapsed and died.

DEPUTY SHERIFF GIVES VERSION OF KILLING

ROY SMITH MAKES DEPOSITION OF SLAYING OF MRS. LILLIAN DE KING

SAID HE SHOT HER BECAUSE HE BELIEVED SHE WAS REACHING FOR GUN

Elgin, Ill., April 2. — (UP) — Deputy Sheriff Roy Smith's version of the killing of Mrs. Lillian De King when he raided her home at Aurora was given today in a deposition taken at the deputy's bedside in St. Joseph's hospital here.

Smith is suffering from a thigh wound received when 12-year-old Gerald De King shot him after the deputy had clubbed Gerald's father and killed his mother.

Coroner Herman Vierke questioned Smith, who said he shot Mrs. De King because he believed she was reaching for her husband's gun with which to drive the dry raider out of her home.

Smith also deposed that Mrs. De King's husband, Joseph, had threatened to kill "anyone who comes through that door" and that he (Smith) had reason to believe that his life was in danger.

"I thought that De King and I were alone in the house when I entered and I thought best to strike him down," the deputy's deposition said.

"I turned the gun around and hit him with the stock. As he fell I heard a woman scream. I did not know up to that time that a woman was in the house.

Court House, Geneva, Ill., April 2.—A deposition made at his bedside by Deputy Sheriff Roy Smith in which the deputy said that Mrs. Lillian De King had a revolver in her hand when he killed her with a sawed-off shotgun while raiding her home for liquor last week was introduced today at the opening of Coroner Herman J. Vierke's inquest into the slaying.

"I looked up in time to see her reach for one of her husband's guns. When I saw she had it in her hand I fired, but I aimed at her hip, not at her shoulders.

"At the same time my gun went off I fell backward with a pain in my leg. I thought the woman had shot me, but then I saw the boy (Gerald De King, 12-year-old son of the slain woman) come out from behind his mother and say:

"'I got him, mama; I got him'."

Smith's deposition was taken in Elgin where he is under treatment in a hospital. The deputy was removed from Aurora, where the De King shooting and clubbing occurred, because of intense feeling against him in that politically wet city of 40,000 persons.

The inquest was brought here for that same reason.

Even here, however, an immense crowd turned out for the inquest, packing the court room and overflowing into the yard outside.

Finally the crowd outside became so insistent about its rights to hear the public inquiry that Coroner Vierke adjourned the inquest to the city hall auditorium which seats about 600 persons.

The right door of the auditorium was almost torn off by the crowd forcing its way through the narrow opening. Once inside the building the crowd continued its unruly behavior.

Coroner Vierke had difficulty establishing order.

City Hall, Geneva, Ill., April 2.—Before a large and partisan crowd which expressed its sentiments with hand clappings, booing and laughter, witnesses at the inquest into the "dry raid killing" of Mrs. Lillian De King of Aurora today gave conflicting versions of the evidence behind the warrant on which the De King home was searched.

Eugene Boyd Fairchild, who was employed as a prohibition investigator for State's Attorney George D. Carbary's office, admitted that he had not bought any liquor from Mrs. De King but said he had sent a friend into the house and that the friend had come back with a pint of moonshine.

Phillip Johnson, Fairchild's friend, was called next and he denied that he had bought the liquor from Mrs. De King.

"I didn't even enter the house," Johnson said. "I met three men in the driveway and got the liquor from them."

When Smith came in, according to his own testimony taken in a deposition today at a hospital in Elgin, he bashed De King over the head with the stock of his shot gun and then shot and killed Mrs. De King because he believed she was going to shoot him.

STRANGEST POLAR DASH CONCEIVED

TRIP UNDER ICE TO NORTH POLE IN REBUILT RESCUE SUBMARINE

Bridgeport, Conn., April 2—((UP) —Simon Lake, who lived to see his undersea boats in the navies of many nations, awaited word today that will set in motion plans for the strangest polar dash ever conceived —a trip under ice to the north pole in the re-built, 25-year-old rescue submarine "Defender" under the direction of Sir George Hubert Wilkins.

Lake was enthusiastic today over the possibility of execution of plans he has cherished for more than a quarter of a century. Sunday when Wilkins, Commander Fitzhugh Green and George Palmer Putnam, the publisher, motored to Bridgeport to inspect the Defender, they found Lake ready to show them detailed plans for equipment of the rotund little vessel for cruising under ice.

Wilkins appeared pleased with the condition of the submarine after an inspection.

"The ship should be in good condition to sail through the Arctic after the installation of two new engines and a larger battery," the explorer said.

Wilkins returned to New York after announcing he would send word, possibly by tomorrow, as to whether Lake should order workmen to begin making the Defender ready for a trip to the polar depths.

Col. Lindbergh is Reticent as Usual; Flies Away, Says Nothing

San Antonio, Texas, April 2. — (UP)—Officials at Kelly Field said today Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off at 2:30 A. M. today for an unannounced destination. He flew here from El Paso, gassed his ship and took off in a southeasterly direction.

He was believed either enroute east to join in tributes when the body of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick reaches American soil, or on a temporary jaunt south to visit his fiance, Miss Anne Morrow, in Mexico City.

GEN. CALLES IS JUBILANT OVER VARIOUS VICTORIES

FEDERALS IN POSSESSION OF IMPORTANT HALF OF JIMINEZ

FIGHTING THERE REGARDED AS ONE OF MOST IMPORTANT ENGAGEMENTS

By G. F. FINE

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Mexico City, April 2.—After reported successes on two principal fronts, federal forces today continued to press their advantage against the rebels and to renew their attack on Jiminez, in Chihuahua, and on La Cruz, in the Pacific coast sector.

Plutarco Elias Calles, in command of the government field operations, informed the presidencia that federal troops were in possession of the important half of Jiminez and expressed the belief that after a renewed attack not a rebel would be left in the town. Officials of the government awaited reports of the battle with great anxiety, regarding it as one of the most important engagements of the rebellion.

Mexico City, April 2.—The bloody battle of Jiminez was continuing at noon today, Gen. Plutarco Calles advised the presidencia by radio.

The rebels have been unable to break out of the federal circle, he reported, and General Juan Almazan is personally directing an offensive against the railroad station and other positions within the town which the insurgents still hold.

The noon bulletin describes the rebels' efforts to break through the federal lines as "desperate."

Naco, Ariz., April 2.—One American was wounded seriously and the lives of others were endangered today when bombs dropped from a Mexican rebel airplane fell on this side of the international line.

The injured American, whose identity was not established, was one of a group of 200 persons lined up on the United States side of the border to watch the air raid on the federal garrison at Naco, Sonora, Mexico.

The remainder of the crowd scampered to safety when they saw that the pilot's aim was not sure. The wounded man was taken to the military hospital. His condition was said to be serious.

Three of four bombs dropped during the raid fell on the American side.

AVIATORS CRECKED FROM THROWING OUT CIRCULARS

Harrisburg, Pa., April 2.—(U.P.)—Aviators who have handbills to deliver in Harrisburg must put them under the doors of the houses.

How they are to accomplish this doesn't matter, according to Chief of Police Joseph Thompson.

A barrage of yellow circulars dropped over the city by an airplane aroused the chief's ire and he dug up an old ordinance which requires circulars be placed under doors to prevent them blowing on the streets.

CRAZED NEGRO KILLS TWO AND WOUNDS THREE

RUNS AMUCK WITH SHOTGUN IN NEWARK, NEW JERSEY

SLAYER TENTATIVELY IDENTIFIED AS JAMES BELL

Newark, N. J., April 2.—(UP)—Two men were killed and three others, one of them a policeman, were wounded when a crazed negro ran amuck with a shotgun here today.

According to witnesses, the negro, tentatively identified later as James Bell, ran into the street from a nearby building and began firing.

A man said to be W. Ramsberg, and an unidentified passerby fell mortally wounded.

Patrolman Thomas Hackett, on duty nearby, rushed to the scene, just as another man fell to the gutter, wounded.

Hackett advanced on the negro, firing as he ran. The negro returned the fire, wounding the officer in the arm.

Another shot from the negro's gun brought Hackett to the pavement with a wound in the leg.

Hackett, from this prone position, emptied the chambers of his revolver into Bell at close range. The negro swayed and crumpled into a heap in the street. Bell died at the city hospital three hours later.

St. Paul, April 2—(U.P.)—Two debonair youths, masked and armed, took J. V. Nelson, manager of the Sanitary Farms Dairies, for a ride in his own car here Monday night and robbed him of $248. Less than six weeks ago the same company was robbed of $1,000.

END OF 1929 SESSION ALMOST IN SIGHT NOW

JOINT SENATE AND HOUSE COMMITTEE TO NOMINATE UNIVERSITY REGENTS

FINAL ACTION EXPECTED ON CIGARET BILL, CAPITOL OFFICE BUILDING, ETC.

By HECTOR PERRIER

St. Paul, April 2.—With the end of the 1929 session almost in sight the Minnesota legislature today geared up its machinery in an effort to prevent a jam of important projects during the last hectic days.

Before nightfall a joint senate and house committee planned to nominate 12 members to the University of Minnesota board of regents, whose election will be conducted in a joint legislative session Wednesday.

At the same time final action was expected soon to be taken on a cigarette tax bill; the $1,500,000 capitol office building bill; national bank tax bills; and an appropriation bill which would reimburse thousands of investors for losses suffered in the promotion schemes of C. A. Cochran.

The regent nominations are not expected to cause any prolonged debate unless the city members attempt to balk the efforts of the rural faction in the legislature to place a "dirt farmer" on the board.

It was generally known that the country men desired to have A. J. Olson, Renville, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation, nominated in place of Samuel Lewison, Canby, in the seventh district. Olson's nomination was not certain, however, since other farm leaders also had support.

Differences between the senate and house on the capitol office building centered about the supervision of the structure's construction. The house has insisted that the $1,500,000 building be erected under the supervision of the Big Three while the senate has held out for supervision by a committee appointed by the governor.

Several of the leading bankers and tax experts of the state appeared before legislative tax committees Monday night to protest against pending bills which would tax "competitive money" in national banks, investment firms and other financial institutions on the same rate imposed on state banks.

There were indications late Monday in the house that the Weeks' bill, which provides that the state appropriate approximately $2,000,000 to repay losses from the Cochran promotion schemes, was doomed to failure.

Representative John A. Weeks, of Minneapolis, author of the bill, contends that the state is responsible for the Cochran losses since the fraudulent stock was apparently sold with the knowledge of a state agent, A. E. Nelson, former securities commissioner, since sentenced to prison.

Meanwhile a bill sponsored by Representative Roy E. Dunn, Pelican Rapids, which would impose a 2-cent tax on cigarettes and a 1-cent tax on cigarette papers awaits action in the senate.

The measure already has hurdled the house barrier. Dunn claims the bill would provide $1,500,000 additional annual state revenue.

St. Paul, April 2.—A special senate committee today agreed on the 12 members to be elected by the legislature Wednesday for the University of Minnesota board of regents.

These 12 names will be brought up before a joint senate and house nominating committee late today and any differences in the choice of candidates will be settled.

The senate nominees follow:

Six year terms: Dr. W. J. Mayo, Rochester, 1st district; John G. Williams, Duluth, 8th district; Fred B. Snyder, Minneapolis, 5th district; L. O. Teigen, Jackson, 2nd district.

Four year terms: Dr. Agil Boeckmann, St. Paul, 4th district; J. M. McConnel, state commissioner of education, at large; A. J. Olson, Renville, 7th district, and W. H. Gemmell, Brainerd, 6th district.

Two year terms: Governor Theodore Christianson, at large; George H. Partridge, Minneapolis, 10th district; J. E. D. Sundberg, Kennedy, 9th district, and J. A. Coller, Shakopee, 3rd district.

DEPUTY SHERIFF GIVES VERSION OF KILLING

ROY SMITH MAKES DEPOSITION OF SLAYING OF MRS. LILLIAN DE KING

SAID HE SHOT HER BECAUSE HE BELIEVED SHE WAS REACHING FOR GUN

Elgin, Ill., April 2. — (UP) — Deputy Sheriff Roy Smith's version of the killing of Mrs. Lillian De King when he raided her home at Aurora was given today in a deposition taken at the deputy's bedside in St. Joseph's hospital here.

STRANGEST POLAR DASH CONCEIVED

Col. Lindbergh is Reticent as Usual; Flies Away, Says Nothing

San Antonio, Texas, April 2. — (UP)—Officials at Kelly Field said today Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off at 2:30 A. M. today for an unannounced destination. He flew here from El Paso, gassed his ship and took off in a southeasterly direction.

He was believed either enroute east to join in tributes when the body of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick reaches American soil, or on a temporary jaunt south to visit his fiance, Miss Anne Morrow, in Mexico City.

GEN. CALLES IS JUBILANT OVER VARIOUS VICTORIES

FEDERALS IN POSSESSION OF IMPORTANT HALF OF JIMINEZ

FIGHTING THERE REGARDED AS ONE OF MOST IMPORTANT ENGAGEMENTS

By G. F. FINE

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Mexico City, April 2.—After reported successes on two principal fronts, federal forces today continued to press their advantage against the rebels and to renew their attack on Jiminez, in Chihuahua, and on La Cruz, in the Pacific coast sector.

Plutarco Elias Calles, in command of the government field operations, informed the presidencia that federal troops were in possession of the important half of Jiminez and expressed the belief that after a renewed attack not a rebel would be left in the town. Officials of the government awaited reports of the battle with great anxiety, regarding it as one of the most important engagements of the rebellion.

Mexico City, April 2.—The bloody battle of Jiminez was continuing at noon today, Gen. Plutarco Calles advised the presidencia by radio.

The rebels have been unable to break out of the federal circle, he reported, and General Juan Almazan is personally directing an offensive against the railroad station and other positions within the town which the insurgents still hold.

The noon bulletin describes the rebels' efforts to break through the federal lines as "desperate."

Naco, Ariz., April 2.—One American was wounded seriously and the lives of others were endangered today when bombs dropped from a Mexican rebel airplane fell on this side of the international line.

The injured American, whose identity was not established, was one of a group of 200 persons lined up on the United States side of the border to watch the air raid on the federal garrison at Naco, Sonora, Mexico.

The remainder of the crowd scampered to safety when they saw that the pilot's aim was not sure. The wounded man was taken to the military hospital. His condition was said to be serious.

Three of four bombs dropped during the raid fell on the American side.

AVIATORS CRECKED FROM THROWING OUT CIRCULARS

Harrisburg, Pa., April 2.—(U.P.)—Aviators who have handbills to deliver in Harrisburg must put them under the doors of the houses.

How they are to accomplish this doesn't matter, according to Chief of Police Joseph Thompson.

A barrage of yellow circulars dropped over the city by an airplane aroused the chief's ire and he dug up an old ordinance which requires circulars be placed under doors to prevent them blowing on the streets.

CRAZED NEGRO KILLS TWO AND WOUNDS THREE

RUNS AMUCK WITH SHOTGUN IN NEWARK, NEW JERSEY

SLAYER TENTATIVELY IDENTIFIED AS JAMES BELL

Newark, N. J., April 2.—(UP)—Two men were killed and three others, one of them a policeman, were wounded when a crazed negro ran amuck with a shotgun here today.

According to witnesses, the negro, tentatively identified later as James Bell, ran into the street from a nearby building and began firing.

A man said to be W. Ramsberg, and an unidentified passerby fell mortally wounded.

Patrolman Thomas Hackett, on duty nearby, rushed to the scene, just as another man fell to the gutter, wounded.

Hackett advanced on the negro, firing as he ran. The negro returned the fire, wounding the officer in the arm.

Another shot from the negro's gun brought Hackett to the pavement with a wound in the leg.

Hackett, from this prone position, emptied the chambers of his revolver into Bell at close range. The negro swayed and crumpled into a heap in the street. Bell died at the city hospital three hours later.

TAKE MAN FOR RIDE IN HIS OWN CAR, THEN ROB HIM

St. Paul, April 2—(U.P.)—Two debonair youths, masked and armed, took J. V. Nelson, manager of the Sanitary Farms Dairies, for a ride in his own car here Monday night and robbed him of $248. Less than six weeks ago the same company was robbed of $1,000.

END OF 1929 SESSION ALMOST IN SIGHT NOW

JOINT SENATE AND HOUSE COMMITTEE TO NOMINATE UNIVERSITY REGENTS

FINAL ACTION EXPECTED ON CIGARET BILL, CAPITOL OFFICE BUILDING, ETC.

By HECTOR PERRIER

St. Paul, April 2.—With the end of the 1929 session almost in sight the Minnesota legislature today geared up its machinery in an effort to prevent a jam of important projects during the last hectic days.

Before nightfall a joint senate and house committee planned to nominate 12 members to the University of Minnesota board of regents, whose election will be conducted in a joint legislative session Wednesday.

At the same time final action was expected soon to be taken on a cigarette tax bill; the $1,500,000 capitol office building bill; national bank tax bills; and an appropriation bill which would reimburse thousands of investors for losses suffered in the promotion schemes of C. A. Cochran.

The regent nominations are not expected to cause any prolonged debate unless the city members attempt to balk the efforts of the rural faction in the legislature to place a "dirt farmer" on the board.

It was generally known that the country men desired to have A. J. Olson, Renville, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation, nominated in place of Samuel Lewison, Canby, in the seventh district. Olson's nomination was not certain, however, since other farm leaders also had support.

Differences between the senate and house on the capitol office building centered about the supervision of the structure's construction. The house has insisted that the $1,500,000 building be erected under the supervision of the Big Three while the senate has held out for supervision by a committee appointed by the governor.

Several of the leading bankers and tax experts of the state appeared before legislative tax committees Monday night to protest against pending bills which would tax "competitive money" in national banks, investment firms and other financial institutions on the same rate imposed on state banks.

There were indications late Monday in the house that the Weeks' bill, which provides that the state appropriate approximately $2,000,000 to repay losses from the Cochran promotion schemes, was doomed to failure.

Representative John A. Weeks, of Minneapolis, author of the bill, contends that the state is responsible for the Cochran losses since the fraudulent stock was apparently sold with the knowledge of a state agent, A. E. Nelson, former securities commissioner, since sentenced to prison.

Meanwhile a bill sponsored by Representative Roy E. Dunn, Pelican Rapids, which would impose a 2-cent tax on cigarettes and a 1-cent tax on cigarette papers awaits action in the senate.

The measure already has hurdled the house barrier. Dunn claims the bill would provide $1,500,000 additional annual state revenue.

St. Paul, April 2.—A special senate committee today agreed on the 12 members to be elected by the legislature Wednesday for the University of Minnesota board of regents.

These 12 names will be brought up before a joint senate and house nominating committee late today and any differences in the choice of candidates will be settled.

The senate nominees follow:

Six year terms: Dr. W. J. Mayo, Rochester, 1st district; John G. Williams, Duluth, 8th district; Fred B. Snyder, Minneapolis, 5th district; L. O. Teigen, Jackson, 2nd district.

Four year terms: Dr. Agil Boeckmann, St. Paul, 4th district; J. M. McConnel, state commissioner of education, at large; A. J. Olson, Renville, 7th district, and W. H. Gemmell, Brainerd, 6th, district.

Two year terms: Governor Theodore Christianson, at large; George H. Partridge, Minneapolis, 10th district; J. E. D. Sundberg, Kennedy, 9th district, and J. A. Coller, Shakopee, 3rd district.

College Life is Cleverly Woven Into Story of Battling Hero, Wm. Haines Picture at Lyceum

Staging a huge prize fight, with William Haines and Jack Roper, professional fighter, in a sensational ring battle before an audience of a thousand, then swinging to intimate scenes about a college campus and sorority houses, this is the gamut of endeavor of James Cruze in his direction of William Haines and Joan Crawford in "The Duke Steps Out," now playing at the Lyceum theatre.

It's not a fight picture, for there is a college in it, and it's not a college picture, either, because half of it is a fight story. Lucian Cary's unique Saturday Evening Post tale is the basis of the production, which offers the film fan something entirely new in the way of story, and of role, for the effervescent Haines and Joan Crawford combination.

NUISANCE TAXES

DURING the war we all grew accustomed to "nuisance taxes," as they were termed, for money had to be raised to carry on the war. President Coolidge worked valiantly with the aid of congress to do away with these taxes when peace came and the public breathed a sigh of relief as one after another of the measures received a quietus and was relegated to oblivion as a tax measure.

As to income taxes, the government has kindly raised the exemptions and eased the burden on the small taxpayers.

Now with the war over, years ago, and the country on a peace time basis, we find the sovereign state of Minnesota searching nooks and crannies for new sources of taxation.

It finds the legislature jockeying with a cigaret bill, entering wedge for the nuisance taxes. One vote finds the bill killed, another vote reconsiders its death and a third vote in the house passes the bill. It is now up to the senate.

There is now before the house another bill of the nuisance kind and to tax cosmetics, it is said.

A Brainerd man came to the Dispatch today and said: "What would happen in Minnesota if somebody urged the taxing of snuff?" As far as we know that may be in line.

Minnesota, in the past, has set a poor example in the matter of taxation. Take the question of iron taxation. No commodity or business in the state gets a three-ply taxation as does iron ore and the industry which takes it from the ground.

There is first the special classification of iron ore with its percentage of 50 per cent used for assessment, then there is the occupation tax and the royalty tax. These iron ore and iron industry taxes seem to have been levied according to the idea used by the railroad and other common carriers in the old days of charging all that the traffic will stand, and then some.

It's human nature that when a thing has once been established it is hard to make a change, and this applies especially to taxation. Any fair minded man will express wonder when he surveys Minnesota's system of iron taxation.

And now, when the effort is being made to add a nuisance tax to Minnesota's tax structure, success in that effort will make a nuisance tax stick as tightly as do the various inequitable iron taxes.

Another thing about taxes that any student will notice is that a legislature is always more anxious to spend money than to save it. To repeal a tax requires superhuman effort compared with the ordinary effort it takes to create new tax measures.

When Governor Christianson preaches economy and does his very best to carry out that economy it arouses a storm among those who oppose him.

Probably the whole trouble centers among many of the people themselves. So many of us are spending our pay check before we get it.

SAFETY IN CHECKS

ONE of the subjects most prolific in the way of texts for comment is that of the safety provided by banks to persons to engage in financial transactions of any kind. Many more persons should adopt the plan of making payments of all kinds by checks instead of in currency, says the St. Cloud Daily Times.

Every few days the newspapers publish accounts of thefts which have been committed in cases of persons who withdraw sums of money from the banks, or use money they have kept in their homes for payments on property or other transactions.

A bank check eliminates all possibility of loss of money in making payments. Bankers are particular to know that persons presenting checks for payment are entitled to the money, and even if a check is stolen it is highly improbable that it can be negotiated by the thief. Banks require identification before making payment on checks, and the writer of the check can immediately stop payment on it if it is stolen.

Persons who keep money in considerable amounts in the home do so at their own risk. Would-be thieves have means of securing information which may not be suspected by the person who keeps money in his home, or they may even take a chance of finding currency hidden about the house. The resulting loss is the same.

There is no reason why any individual should draw currency from the bank when a check will complete a financial transaction; neither is there any excuse for a person to be his own banker.

UNDER ARCTIC ICE

WE notice that Sir George Hubert Wilkins is to get to the North Pole by submarine. He will navigate on the surface wherever possible and when the ice field gets too thick and impassable he is, according to present plans, to dip under the ice and continue.

This sounds all right and seem probable, but one thing has not been taken into account and that is the amount of ice to be encountered. In cold regions, as the Yukon river territory, old timers have discovered that the ice freezes on the surface of the water and then as the cold grows more intense, the ice forms below in the river bed until the small stream flows through what is practically an ice-enclosed tube, top bottom and sides of the river are ice-encased.

In like manner Sir George Hubert Wilkins may run the nose of his undersea craft into underwater ice barriers and strike a blind alley of ice. The Polar sea has no regular flow like a river. The bottom of the Polar sea is undoubtedly encased in heavy ridges as rough and rugged as the surface ice.

The undertaking of submarine exploration of the North Pole reads good but we fear the difficulties to be encountered may spell the doom of the gallant crew.

DEFECTIVE SIDEWALKS

THERE are sidewalks in this city that are in need of repair. The council last night took a step in the right direction by asking citizens to report to the aldermen of their ward defective walks.

We have in mind several places on the south side where growing trees have pitched the level of the walk in several directions and caused cracks to appear. In other sections of the city walks are off level because they have been built according to different grades.

Citizens should take an inventory of walks in their wards and report promptly to their aldermen.

Impatient Griselda

by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

FOR twenty years Irene Robeline struggled cheerfully along as the wife of Guinn Holden, Texas minister. Beneath a cheery smile was a bruised heart. Irene could never capture Holden's love for his first wife, Lilith, that now was given to his beautiful blonde daughter named after her dead mother. Lilith was spoiled by her adoring father. Tina, his daughter by Irene, a dazzling brunette with Ross, Lundy and Patricia, younger children, all came second in his affections. When Lilith goes to New York for a year's music study she meets her first taste of grief. Falling in love with Bill Chester, she breaks her engagement to a Texas boy. Bill called to Paris by his rich grandfather, cables Lilith that he is marrying Sally Burton, to whom he was engaged. Lilith, shaken with anger and bitterness, learns she is to have a child. Irene and Dr. Lundy secretly care for her in New York to prevent Holden from knowing the truth. After the infant's premature birth and death they return home with Lilith. Happiness prevails as Tina is praparing wedding plans for her marriage to a handsome local lad. They will tour the world on their honeymoon. Irene is torn by happiness for Tina and fear for Lilith's shame becoming known. Lilith slowly recovers—more beautiful than ever and her father's idol. He forbids her return to New York. Likewise he denies Tina permission for an early wedding date.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

SHE sat down on the bench beside him, and laid her cheek against his sleeve. "Oh, Guinn, won't you be guided by my mother instinct just now? I want our two girls to be happy in their own way. Let's let them have their wishes, won't you, darling?"

Tears oozed through her half-closed eyes and wet his sleeve.

He patted her hand. "You're overtired with all this wedding fuss—inclined to be a little hysterical. You'll be all right in three weeks."

"And you won't do it?"

"No. Sorry."

She sprang to her feet. "Guinn Holden, you are acting in an outrageous way! And so—stupid, so blind!"

"Think so?"

"I know it—and if you estrange your daughters from you, don't be surprised."

She fled into the house and up to her room, afraid that if she stayed she might say too much. She sat on a footstool by a window in her room and leaned her head against the sill. The room was in half darkness, the furniture like queer, alien objects, menacing, the trees outside were great blobs of shadow, into which peered the instant, inquiring lights of fireflies, and above in the sky a few pale stars pricked out against the blue gray.

Frogs croaked in a pond near by, their noise drowned out at intervals as a car slithered past with hiss and shriek, as if the car had run over the frogs. In a vacant lot near by a ring of children were playing "We're Marching 'Round the Levee," Pat's treble shrilling above the other voices.

"I measure my love to show you,
I measure my love to show you,
I measure my love to show you,
For we have gained the day!"

A breeze touched her cheek lightly, ruffled her hair. Mingled odors from the garden stole up to her, scent of roses, of honeysuckle, of sweet basils and lemon verbena wet from the sprinkling she had given. Her nostrils savored each perfume, found comfort in it . . . Maybe tomorrow, or next week, or after the wedding, she could persuade Guinn to let Lilith go to New York. If only he could understand how dangerous it was to cross her! Will Lundy would help reason with him . . . The wedding was only three weeks away. She was tired, and maybe took an hysterical view of everything . . . And Guinn was so good, he didn't mean to be mulish. In three weeks everything would seem different.

She dozed a little at her window, before she roused to call Pat to go to bed.

"I measure my love to show you,
For we have gained the day!"

hummed the small daughter as she mounted the stair. . . .

Next day Irene was outwardly her serene self again, but apprehension nibbled at her nerves, made her jumpy and alert. Guinn went about with the air, at once conciliatory and jovial, of a man who has had his way but somewhat questions the wisdom of it, though he refuses to change his ruling. Tina was quiet, with a mutinous set to her unsmiling mouth, reproach in her eyes when she was in her father's presence. Lilith wore a slightly ironic smile on her lips that had won back their rich color and soft curves. In the kitchen Sheba brooded over the stove like a voodoo priestess balked in her cunning, but on the watch.

"How queer my household is!" Irene whispered to herself as she cleaned out the bathroom after Pat's splashing. How one day had changed its temper! Yet, after all, what had happened? Guinn had advised Tina and Dan to wait till their proper wedding day, and had told Lilith he wasn't willing for her to go to New York. He'd been perfectly affectionate in both cases. Yet each daughter flaunted a grievance on lip, in eye. The girls ought to remember what tyrants some fathers were—yet the girls were obviously not remembering.

After supper she heard Tina say to Dan "We have to finish addressing those invitations.

The house had a feeling as if it were secretly mined, and Irene almost looked for trails of gunpowder along the halls, in dark corners. . . . She'd be glad when the wedding was over, even though Tina would be speeding away from her to Paris. Tina would adore Paris. In her fancy she was already reading the child's letters and post cards, excited, rapturous, gay. In a world crammed with disappointments, it was heartening to think of anyone as utterly happy as Tina would be on her honeymoon. Tina didn't love Dan any more than she had loved Guinn. Oh, no, that wasn't possible! But the little girl hadn't had to bear the heartbreak, the wait, the disillusionment as preface to her wedding that she herself had known. Tina's lover hadn't asked her to marry him because of—pot liquor!

Irene gave a wobbly laugh to herself.

With ears preternaturally sharp, she listened for any sound that might hint danger to the household peace; with alert eyes looked for any sign of peril, and called herself a fool to suffer from the "worry blues."

After supper she heard Tina say to Dan: "We have to finish addressing those invitations, Danny."

"I don't want to address invitations. I want to be married now, without 'em." There was boyish sullenness in his tone.

"'An' you ain't by yo'self in dat, in dat,
An' you ain't by yo'self in dat.'"

she quoted from a darkey song. "But the cards are here, and if we don't send 'em out, we'll not get any presents. Savez?"

Then she called up the stairway: "Lilith, come down and help us address invitations if you feel like it."

Lilith descended the stairs with languorous grace, one sculptured arm gliding down the handrail, the hem of her blue chiffon skirt fluffing out with each step, like the calyx of a flower. The heat had made her yellow hair wavier than ever, and her cheeks were flushed, her eyes full of starry excitement.

"Hello, Dan," she said.

Irene grated her teeth at the sight and the words. Lilith was so—damnably beautiful. Beside her Tina was an unsophisticated little girl. In Lilith's eyes were [illegible]eties, mysteries, allurements, [illegible] her lips were a scarlet challenge. It wasn't fair for Dan's image of Tina to be blurred by the contrast of such beauty. Who knew what delicate difference it might make in his love for Tina?

Dan stood with folded arms and compressed lips, watching Lilith come down the stairway.

Irene stepped forward. "Lilith, if you'd rather drive with your father than address invitations I'll help Dan and Tina."

"Yes, come on and ride with me," Guinn called.

"No, thank you, father. It's too hot to go out. I'll stay and address invitations," she said smoothly.

What was in the look she gave her father — polite defiance, a flicker of malice, mystery or mirth? Oh, Guinn would be made to feel her hardness, now that he refused to do her will! How long would he be able to hold out against her?

He turned away, a hurt look in his eyes. "Come, Patsy, and go with your dad to see old Mrs. Witherspoon."

Pat ran to snatch his hand and skip away beside him.

Scant pleasure Guinn was going to have of Lilith's enforced stay at home. She'd have her own ways of revenge. Poor Guinn!—but then, he had brought it on himself and if he yielded to her demands, she would be nice to him again. . . .

How could that unknown man have withstood her? Irene asked herself. Was he really married, as she had hinted, or was that merely to throw suspicion off the track? Was he back in New York now, or was he in Paris? What would explain the girl's determination to get to Paris? Whoever he was, if he saw her in such heightened beauty, surely he must yield to her spell and marry her. If he wasn't married to someone else, that would be the solution for everything. . . .

BYES WIN GAME UNDER PROTEST

DARKNESS APPEARING AT CRUCIAL TIME OF GAME CAUSES TROUBLE

Just who won the opening kittenball game of the season last evening is a conundrum to many today, as one team claims the honor and the other asserts that the game ended in a tie.

The John M. Bye Clothing Co. did win the game by present indications unless a protest made by the Service Motor Co. reverses it.

The situation was as follows:

The score was 10 to 8 for the John M. Bye team at the close of the fourth inning. Darkness crept on.

Near the close of the second half of the fifth inning the Service Motor boys came through with two runs to tie the score. With a man on third base and none out, the referee called the game.

The rules assert that four innings played constitute a game when such game is called because of darkness or rain.

The Service Motor boys are protesting the decision and there hangs the tale. The matter will likely be decided at the next meeting of the league officials.

Meanwhile the Paul M. Jones team and the Nash-Finch boys will play tonight at the grounds near the water tower.

Some heavy hitting featured the game last night. Otto Heikkinen of the Service Motor met the enlarged pill for two hefty home runs, one of them landing way out of the lot. V. Wunderlich clouted out a beauty for the Byes which resulted in a homer.

DEMPSEY TO BID NEAR MILLION FOR DETROIT OLYMPIA

New York, April 2.—(U.P.)—Jack Dempsey was on his way to Detroit today with authority to make an offer for the Detroit Olympia, an indoor arena similar to Madison Square Garden.

Humbert J. Fugazy, with whom the former heavyweight champion is associated, intimated Dempsey would offer in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

NUISANCE TAXES

DURING the war we all grew accustomed to "nuisance taxes," as they were termed, for money had to be raised to carry on the war. President Coolidge worked valiantly with the aid of congress to do away with these taxes when peace came and the public breathed a sigh of relief as one after another of the measures received a quietus and was relegated to oblivion as a tax measure.

As to income taxes, the government has kindly raised the exemptions and eased the burden on the small taxpayers.

Now with the war over, years ago, and the country on a peace time basis we find the sovereign state of Minnesota searching nooks and crannies for new sources of taxation.

It finds the legislature jockeying with a cigaret bill, entering wedge for the nuisance taxes. One vote finds the bill killed, another vote reconsiders its death and a third vote in the house passes the bill. It is now up to the senate.

There is now before the house another bill of the nuisance kind and to tax cosmetics, it is said.

A Brainerd man came to the Dispatch today and said: "What would happen in Minnesota if somebody urged the taxing of snuff?" As far as we know that may be in line.

Minnesota, in the past, has set a poor example in the matter of taxation. Take the question of iron taxation. No commodity or business in the state gets a three-ply taxation as does iron ore and the industry which takes it from the ground.

There is first the special classification of iron ore with its percentage of 50 per cent used for assessment, then there is the occupation tax and the royalty tax. These iron ore and iron industry taxes seem to have been levied according to the idea used by the railroad and other common carriers in the old days of charging all that the traffic will stand, and then some.

It's human nature that when a thing has once been established it is hard to make a change, and this applies especially to taxation. Any fair minded man will express wonder when he surveys Minnesota's system of iron taxation.

And now, when the effort is being made to add a nuisance tax to Minnesota's tax structure, success in that effort will make a nuisance tax stick as tightly as do the various inequitable iron taxes.

Another thing about taxes that any student will notice is that a legislature is always more anxious to spend money than to save it. To repeal a tax requires superhuman effort compared with the ordinary effort it takes to create new tax measures.

When Governor Christianson preaches economy and does his very best to carry out that economy it arouses a storm among those who oppose him.

Probably the whole trouble centers among many of the people themselves. So many of us are spending our pay check before we get it.

SAFETY IN CHECKS

ONE of the subjects most prolific in the way of texts for comment is that of the safety provided by banks to persons to engage in financial transactions of any kind. Many more persons should adopt the plan of making payments of all kinds by checks instead of in currency, says the St. Cloud Daily Times.

Every few days the newspapers publish accounts of thefts which have been committed in cases of persons who withdraw sums of money from the banks, or use money they have kept in their homes for payments on property or other transactions.

A bank check eliminates all possibility of loss of money in making payments. Bankers are particular to know that persons presenting checks for payment are entitled to the money, and even if a check is stolen it is highly improbable that it can be negotiated by the thief. Banks require identification before making payment on checks, and the writer of the check can immediately stop payment on it if it is stolen.

Persons who keep money in considerable amounts in the home do so at their own risk. Would-be thieves have means of securing information which may not be suspected by the person who keeps money in his home, or they may even take a chance of finding currency hidden about the house. The resulting loss is the same.

There is no reason why any individual should draw currency from the bank when a check will complete a financial transaction; neither is there any excuse for a person to be his own banker.

UNDER ARCTIC ICE

WE notice that Sir George Hubert Wilkins is to get to the North Pole by submarine. He will navigate on the surface wherever possible and when the ice field gets too thick and impassable he is, according to present plans, to dip under the ice and continue.

This sounds all right and seem probable, but one thing has not been taken into account and that is the amount of ice to be encountered. In cold regions, as the Yukon river territory, old timers have discovered that the ice freezes on the surface of the water and then as the cold grows more intense, the ice forms below in the river bed until the small stream flows through what is practically an ice-enclosed tube, top bottom and sides of the river are ice-encased.

In like manner Sir George Hubert Wilkins may run the nose of his undersea craft into underwater ice barriers and strike a blind alley of ice. The Polar sea has no regular flow like a river. The bottom of the Polar sea is undoubtedly encased in heavy ridges as rough and rugged as the surface ice.

The undertaking of submarine exploration of the North Pole reads good but we fear the difficulties to be encountered may spell the doom of the gallant crew.

DEFECTIVE SIDEWALKS

THERE are sidewalks in this city that are in need of repair. The council last night took a step in the right direction by asking citizens to report to the aldermen of their ward defective walks.

We have in mind several places on the south side where growing trees have pitched the level of the walk in several directions and caused cracks to appear. In other sections of the city walks are off level because they have been built according to different grades.

Citizens should take an inventory of walks in their wards and report promptly to their aldermen.

Impatient Griselda

by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

FOR twenty years Irene Robeline struggled cheerfully along as the wife of Guinn Holden, Texas minister. Beneath a cheery smile was a bruised heart. Irene could never capture Holden's love for his first wife, Lilith, that now was given to his beautiful blonde daughter named after her dead mother. Lilith was spoiled by her adoring father. Tina, his daughter by Irene, a dazzling brunette with Ross, Lundy and Patricia, younger children, all came second in his affections. When Lilith goes to New York for a year's music study she meets her first taste of grief. Falling in love with Bill Chester, she breaks her engagement to a Texas boy. Bill called to Paris by his rich grandfather, cables Lilith that he is marrying Sally Burton, to whom he was engaged. Lilith, shaken with anger and bitterness, learns she is to have a child. Irene and Dr. Lundy secretly care for her in New York to prevent Holden from knowing the truth. After the infant's premature birth and death they return home with Lilith. Happiness prevails as Tina is praparing wedding plans for her marriage to a handsome local lad. They will tour the world on their honeymoon. Irene is torn by happiness for Tina and fear for Lilith's shame becoming known. Lilith slowly recovers—more beautiful than ever and her father's idol. He forbids her return to New York. Likewise he denies Tina permission for an early wedding date.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

SHE sat down on the bench beside him, and laid her cheek against his sleeve. "Oh, Guinn, won't you be guided by my mother instinct just now? I want our two girls to be happy in their own way. Let's let them have their wishes, won't you, darling?"

Tears oozed through her half-closed eyes and wet his sleeve.

He patted her hand. "You're overtired with all this wedding fuss—inclined to be a little hysterical. You'll be all right in three weeks."

"And you won't do it?"

"No. Sorry."

She sprang to her feet. "Guinn Holden, you are acting in an outrageous way! And so—stupid, so blind!"

"Think so?"

"I know it—and if you estrange your daughters from you, don't be surprised."

She fled into the house and up to her room, afraid that if she stayed she might say too much. She sat on a footstool by a window in her room and leaned her head against the sill. The room was in half darkness, the furniture like queer, alien objects, menacing, the trees outside were great blobs of shadow, into which peered the instant, inquiring lights of fireflies, and above in the sky a few pale stars pricked out against the blue gray.

Frogs croaked in a pond near by, their noise drowned out at intervals as a car slithered past with hiss and shriek, as if the car had run over the frogs. In a vacant lot near by a ring of children were playing "We're Marching 'Round the Levee," Pat's treble shrilling above the other voices.

"I measure my love to show you,
I measure my love to show you,
I measure my love to show you,
For we have gained the day!"

A breeze touched her cheek lightly, ruffled her hair. Mingled odors from the garden stole up to her, scent of roses, of honeysuckle, of sweet basils and lemon verbena wet from the sprinkling she had given. Her nostrils savored each perfume, found comfort in it . . . Maybe tomorrow, or next week, or after the wedding, she could persuade Guinn to let Lilith go to New York. If only he could understand how dangerous it was to cross her! Will Lundy would help reason with him . . . The wedding was only three weeks away. She was tired, and maybe took an hysterical view of everything . . . And Guinn was so good, he didn't mean to be mulish. In three weeks everything would seem different.

She dozed a little at her window, before she roused to call Pat to go to bed.

"I measure my love to show you,
For we have gained the day!"

hummed the small daughter as she mounted the stair. . . .

Next day Irene was outwardly her serene self again, but apprehension nibbled at her nerves, made her jumpy and alert. Guinn went about with the air, at once conciliatory and jovial, of a man who has had his way but somewhat questions the wisdom of it, though he refuses to change his ruling. Tina was quiet, with a mutinous set to her unsmiling mouth, reproach in her eyes when she was in her father's presence. Lilith wore a slightly ironic smile on her lips that had won back their rich color and soft curves. In the kitchen Sheba brooded over the stove like a voodoo priestess balked in her cunning, but on the watch.

"How queer my household is!" Irene whispered to herself as she cleaned out the bathroom after Pat's splashing. How one day had changed its temper! Yet, after all, what had happened? Guinn had

"'An' you ain't by yo'self in dat, in dat,
An' you ain't by yo'self in dat.'"

she quoted from a darkey song. "But the cards are here, and if we don't send 'em out, we'll not get any presents. Savez?"

Then she called up the stairway: "Lilith, come down and help us address invitations if you feel like it."

Lilith descended the stairs with languorous grace, one sculptured arm gliding down the handrail, the hem of her blue chiffon skirt fluffing out with each step, like the calyx of a flower. The heat had made her yellow hair wavier than ever, and her cheeks were flushed, her eyes full of starry excitement.

"Hello, Dan," she said.

Irene grated her teeth at the sight and the words. Lilith was so—damnably beautiful. Beside her Tina was an unsophisticated little girl. In Lilith's eyes were [illegible]eties, mysteries, allurements, while her lips were a scarlet challenge. It wasn't fair for Dan's image of Tina to be blurred by the contrast of such beauty. Who knew what delicate difference it might make in his love for Tina?

Dan stood with folded arms and

After supper she heard Tina say to Dan "We have to finish addressing those invitations.

advised Tina and Dan to wait till their proper wedding day, and had told Lilith he wasn't willing for her to go to New York. He'd been perfectly affectionate in both cases. Yet each daughter flaunted a grievance on lip, in eye. The girls ought to remember what tyrants some fathers were—yet the girls were obviously not remembering.

The house had a feeling as if it were secretly mined, and Irene almost looked for trails of gunpowder along the halls, in dark corners. . . . She'd be glad when the wedding was over, even though Tina would be speeding away from her to Paris. Tina would adore Paris. In her fancy she was already reading the child's letters and post cards, excited, rapturous, gay. In a world crammed with disappointments, it was heartening to think of anyone as utterly happy as Tina would be on her honeymoon. Tina didn't love Dan any more than she had loved Guinn. Oh, no, that wasn't possible! But the little girl hadn't had to bear the heartbreak, the wait, the disillusionment as preface to her wedding that she herself had known. Tina's lover hadn't asked her to marry him because of—pot liquor!

Irene gave a wobbly laugh to herself.

With ears preternaturally sharp, she listened for any sound that might hint danger to the household peace; with alert eyes looked for any sign of peril, and called herself a fool to suffer from the "worry blues."

After supper she heard Tina say to Dan: "We have to finish addressing those invitations, Danny."

"I don't want to address invitations. I want to be married now, without 'em." There was boyish sullenness in his tone.

compressed lips, watching Lilith come down the stairway.

Irene stepped forward. "Lilith, if you'd rather drive with your father than address invitations I'll help Dan and Tina."

"Yes, come on and ride with me," Guinn called.

"No, thank you, father. It's too hot to go out. I'll stay and address invitations," she said smoothly.

What was in the look she gave her father — polite defiance, a flicker of malice, mystery or mirth? Oh, Guinn would be made to feel her hardness, now that he refused to do her will! How long would he be able to hold out against her?

He turned away, a hurt look in his eyes. "Come, Patsy, and go with your dad to see old Mrs. Witherspoon."

Pat ran to snatch his hand and skip away beside him.

Scant pleasure Guinn was going to have of Lilith's enforced stay at home. She'd have her own ways of revenge. Poor Guinn!—but then, he had brought it on himself and if he yielded to her demands, she would be nice to him again. . . .

How could that unknown man have withstood her? Irene asked herself. Was he really married, as she had hinted, or was that merely to throw suspicion off the track? Was he back in New York now, or was he in Paris? What would explain the girl's determination to get to Paris? Whoever he was, if he saw her in such heightened beauty, surely he must yield to her spell and marry her. If he wasn't married to someone else, that would be the solution for everything. . . .

BYES WIN GAME UNDER PROTEST

DARKNESS APPEARING AT CRUCIAL TIME OF GAME CAUSES TROUBLE

Just who won the opening kittenball game of the season last evening is a conundrum to many today, as one team claims the honor and the other asserts that the game ended in a tie.

The John M. Bye Clothing Co. did win the game by present indications unless a protest made by the Service Motor Co. reverses it.

The situation was as follows:

The score was 10 to 8 for the John M. Bye team at the close of the fourth inning. Darkness crept on.

Near the close of the second half of the fifth inning the Service Motor boys came through with two runs to tie the score. With a man on third base and none out, the referee called the game.

The rules assert that four innings played constitute a game when such game is called because of darkness or rain.

The Service Motor boys are protesting the decision and there hangs the tale. The matter will likely be decided at the next meeting of the league officials.

Meanwhile the Paul M. Jones team and the Nash-Finch boys will play tonight at the grounds near the water tower.

Some heavy hitting featured the game last night. Otto Heikkinen of the Service Motor met the enlarged pill for two hefty home runs, one of them landing way out of the lot. V. Wunderlich clouted out a beauty for the Byes which resulted in a homer.

DEMPSEY TO BID NEAR MILLION FOR DETROIT OLYMPIA

New York, April 2.—(U.P.) Jack Dempsey was on his way to Detroit today with authority to make an offer for the Detroit Olympia, an indoor arena similar to Madison Square Garden.

Humbert J. Fugazy, with whom the former heavyweight champion is associated, intimated Dempsey would offer in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

DEFECTIVE WALKS TO RECEIVE ATTENTION

Home Owners to Report All Sidewalks Not in Good Repair to Aldermen of Ward

CONSIDERS TRUCK PURCHASE

Council Refers Request for 3100 Feet Sewer to Aldermen of Third Ward

Defective sidewalks throughout the city came under consideration of the city council last evening, the last meeting of the council before election and the second last meeting of the present council.

Desiring to secure information as to the various walks where repair has become a necessity the council asked the cooperation of city residents in requesting that any complaints of defective walks be made to the aldermen of the respective wards.

Aldermen from the various wards will report all defects to the city engineer and the city council. The repair work may be authorized at the next meeting of the council or it may be left over to the new council.

The resolution to investigate all sidewalks was made by Aldermen Ernest Ritari and W. J. Hall and carried the unanimous support of the council.

City Engineer R. T. Campbell reported that he had made a survey of the ground affected by the proposed new sewer on Fourth and Fifth avenues north of Ash avenue in the vicinity of I street. The survey showed that 3100 feet of sewer would be necessary for the construction, the cost to be $1.25 per lineal foot. Seventy two lots of 50 feet each would be affected, the assessment on each lot to amount to $55, Mr. Campbell reported.

Aldermen of the third ward were instructed to investigate the need of the proposed sewer and the attitude of the lot owners affected by the proposed work. These aldermen will report back to the city council at its next meeting.

On motion of Aldermen Martin Anderson and W. J. Hall, the city clerk was instructed to advertise for bids for a two and three ton truck, bids to be opened at the next meeting of the city council.

On motion of Aldermen R. H Paine and V. F. Anderson, $225 was ordered transferred from the general fund to the library fund for the purpose of repairing the Brainerd Public Library.

Mrs. W. C. Rasch, president of the Library Board who made the request stated that the board contemplated the painting of the roof and the redecorating of the inside of the building.

On motion of Aldermen C. G Holmstrom and Ernest Ritari the City Water and Light Board were authorized to purchase a new truck at the cost of $588.

The request for permission to purchase the truck was made by W. D McKay, secretary of the water and light department who stated that a second truck was necessary for the department and that the board had already approved its purchase subject to the approval of the city council.

The financial report of the Brainerd Public Library showed a balance on hand as of April 1 of $265.42. This balance however will be augmented to approximately $900 with the receiving of the March settlement.

George P. Stein was granted a renewal of his taxi cab license, his request being accompanied by a check for $40, the cost of the license.

The request of George Wicks for a taxi license was also granted subject to the approval of the mayor and the police committee.

The request of Harry Perlman for a renewal of a junk dealers license was granted. His request was accompanied by a check for $25, the cost of the license.

The Park Board's financial report showed a balance on hand of $142.38 with debts outstanding, $406.52. The announcement was made however that the Park Board was considering the renting of Lum Park concessions this summer which rental would bring in $600. The report was referred to the finance committee for checking.

The request of Walter P. Tyrholm for permission to construct a picket fence on property, the northeast corner of 7th and Maple streets was granted. Aldermen Holmstrom, Martin Anderson and Paine opposed the resolution on the grounds that the picket fence would constitute a hazard.

The request of the Crawford Motor Sales to construct a drive in filling station at their garage on Front and Fifth streets was granted subject to the approval of the city engineer.

The city engineer was instructed to repair the washout on Norwood street between 9th and 10th streets.

The council voted not to pay the claim of Harry O'Brien in the amount of approximately $40 because in the belief of the council the claim was not presented to the city within the specified 30 days.

The claim was on outcome of a few months back when Mr. O'Brien claimed he damaged his car by striking an elevated manhole on H street.

The council instructed the city engineer to have all stand pipes on city sidewalks cut down flush with the walks.

A warning was ordered issued to all motorists and truck drivers to observe the city ordinance in respect to cutouts on cars and trucks.

Interference, that humdrum obstacle, the bane to every radio owner's existence, has received a severe blow in Brainerd and everything points to a knockout in favor of better radio reception if the plan now being worked by the Brainerd Radio club materializes.

Lester Parks, of the Finlay Electric Co., an expert in discovering causes for interference has already located a great deal of the trouble.

However the financial status of the club is such that unds will be depleted within a d unless restocked. Those interested this worthwhile work are invited contribute to a fund to take care expenses in doing away with in rence. Those desiring to assist ld make their contributions to D K. Cohen.

It is the belief t Mr. Parks can practically elimina terference in the city to radio re on. Already one of the greatest ics has been located and will medied this week.

Goodness Doubly Assured

Deeds, not words, build a good name! The name of Dodge Brothers stands for endurance, trustworthiness, long life. Its reputation for dependability rests on a solid and unshakable foundation of years of honest motor car manufacture. The name of Walter P. Chrysler stands for style, for engineering leadership and integrity. His genius has been proved by a long succession of achievements that have virtually revolutionized motor car construction and design. That is why the new Dodge Brothers Six is so outstanding in character and behavior. The sturdiness so long associated with Dodge Brothers cars is a guarantee of its stamina. Its vivid style and spirited performance typify it as a Chrysler creation.

NUISANCE TAXES

DURING the war we all grew accustomed to "nuisance taxes," as they were termed, for money had to be raised to carry on the war. President Coolidge worked valiantly with the aid of congress to do away with these taxes when peace came and the public breathed a sigh of relief as one after another of the measures received a quietus and was relegated to oblivion as a tax measure.

As to income taxes, the government has kindly raised the exemptions and eased the burden on the small taxpayers.

Now with the war over, years ago, and the country on a peace time basis we find the sovereign state of Minnesota searching nooks and crannies for new sources of taxation.

It finds the legislature jockeying with a cigaret bill, entering wedge for the nuisance taxes. One vote finds the bill killed, another vote reconsiders its death and a third vote in the house passes the bill. It is now up to the senate.

There is now before the house another bill of the nuisance kind and to tax cosmetics, it is said.

A Brainerd man came to the Dispatch today and said: "What would happen in Minnesota if somebody urged the taxing of snuff?" As far as we know that may be in line.

Minnesota, in the past, has set a poor example in the matter of taxation. Take the question of iron taxation. No commodity or business in the state gets a three-ply taxation as does iron ore and the industry which takes it from the ground.

There is first the special classification of iron ore with its percentage of 50 per cent used for assessment, then there is the occupation tax and the royalty tax. These iron ore and iron industry taxes seem to have been levied according to the idea used by the railroad and other common carriers in the old days of charging all that the traffic will stand, and then some.

It's human nature that when a thing has once been established it is hard to make a change, and this applies especially to taxation. Any fair minded man will express wonder when he surveys Minnesota's system of iron taxation.

And now, when the effort is being made to add a nuisance tax to Minnesota's tax structure, success in that effort will make a nuisance tax stick as tightly as do the various inequitable iron taxes.

Another thing about taxes that any student will notice is that a legislature is always more anxious to spend money than to save it. To repeal a tax requires superhuman effort compared with the ordinary effort it takes to create new tax measures.

When Governor Christianson preaches economy and does his very best to carry out that economy it arouses a storm among those who oppose him.

Probably the whole trouble centers among many of the people themselves. So many of us are spending our pay check before we get it.

SAFETY IN CHECKS

ONE of the subjects most prolific in the way of texts for comment is that of the safety provided by banks to persons to engage in financial transactions of any kind. Many more persons should adopt the plan of making payments of all kinds by checks instead of in currency, says the St. Cloud Daily Times.

Every few days the newspapers publish accounts of thefts which have been committed in cases of persons who withdraw sums of money from the banks, or use money they have kept in their homes for payments on property or other transactions.

A bank check eliminates all possibility of loss of money in making payments. Bankers are particular to know that persons presenting checks for payment are entitled to the money, and even if a check is stolen it is highly improbable that it can be negotiated by the thief. Banks require identification before making payment on checks, and the writer of the check can immediately stop payment on it if it is stolen.

Persons who keep money in considerable amounts in the home do so at their own risk. Would-be thieves have means of securing information which may not be suspected by the person who keeps money in his home, or they may even take a chance of finding currency hidden about the house. The resulting loss is the same.

There is no reason why any individual should draw currency from the bank when a check will complete a financial transaction; neither is there any excuse for a person to be his own banker.

UNDER ARCTIC ICE

WE notice that Sir George Hubert Wilkins is to get to the North Pole by submarine. He will navigate on the surface wherever possible and when the ice field gets too thick and impassable he is, according to present plans, to dip under the ice and continue.

This sounds all right and seem probable, but one thing has not been taken into account and that is the amount of ice to be encountered. In cold regions, as the Yukon river territory, old timers have discovered that the ice freezes on the surface of the water and then as the cold grows more intense, the ice forms below in the river bed until the small stream flows through what is practically an ice-enclosed tube, top bottom and sides of the river are ice-encased.

In like manner Sir George Hubert Wilkins may run the nose of his undersea craft into underwater ice barriers and strike a blind alley of ice. The Polar sea has no regular flow like a river. The bottom of the Polar sea is undoubtedly encased in heavy ridges as rough and rugged as the surface ice.

The undertaking of submarine exploration of the North Pole reads good but we fear the difficulties to be encountered may spell the doom of the gallant crew.

DEFECTIVE SIDEWALKS

THERE are sidewalks in this city that are in need of repair. The council last night took a step in the right direction by asking citizens to report to the aldermen of their ward defective walks.

We have in mind several places on the south side where growing trees have pitched the level of the walk in several directions and caused cracks to appear. In other sections of the city walks are off level because they have been built according to different grades.

Citizens should take an inventory of walks in their wards and report promptly to their aldermen.

Impatient Griselda

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

FOR twenty years Irene Robeline struggled cheerfully along as the wife of Guinn Holden, Texas minister. Beneath a cheery smile was a bruised heart. Irene could never capture Holden's love for his first wife, Lilith, that now was given to his beautiful blonde daughter named after her dead mother. Lilith was spoiled by her adoring father. Tina, his daughter by Irene, a dazzling brunette with Ross, Lundy and Patricia, younger children, all came second in his affections. When Lilith goes to New York for a year's music study she meets her first taste of grief. Falling in love with Bill Chester, she breaks her engagement to a Texas boy. Bill called to Paris by his rich grandfather, cables Lilith that he is marrying Sally Burton, to whom he was engaged. Lilith, shaken with anger and bitterness, learns she is to have a child. Irene and Dr. Lundy secretly care for her in New York to prevent Holden from knowing the truth. After the infant's premature birth and death they return home with Lilith. Happiness prevails as Tina is praparing wedding plans for her marriage to a handsome local lad. They will tour the world on their honeymoon. Irene is torn by happiness for Tina and fear for Lilith's shame becoming known. Lilith slowly recovers—more beautiful than ever and her father's idol. He forbids her return to New York. Likewise he denies Tina permission for an early wedding date.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

SHE sat down on the bench beside him, and laid her cheek against his sleeve. "Oh, Guinn, won't you be guided by my mother instinct just now? I want our two girls to be happy in their own way. Let's let them have their wishes, won't you, darling?"

Tears oozed through her half-closed eyes and wet his sleeve.

He patted her hand. "You're overtired with all this wedding fuss—inclined to be a little hysterical. You'll be all right in three weeks."

"And you won't do it?"

"No. Sorry."

She sprang to her feet. "Guinn Holden, you are acting in an outrageous way! And so—stupid, so blind!"

"Think so?"

"I know it—and if you estrange your daughters from you, don't be surprised."

She fled into the house and up to her room, afraid that if she stayed she might say too much. She sat on a footstool by a window in her room and leaned her head against the sill. The room was in half darkness, the furniture like queer, alien objects, menacing, the trees outside were great blobs of shadow, into which peered the instant, inquiring lights of fireflies, and above in the sky a few pale stars pricked out against the blue gray.

Frogs croaked in a pond near by, their noise drowned out at intervals as a car slithered past with hiss and shriek, as if the car had run over the frogs. In a vacant lot near by a ring of children were playing "We're Marching 'Round the Levee," Pat's treble shrilling above the other voices.

"I measure my love to show you,
I measure my love to show you,
I measure my love to show you,
For we have gained the day!"

A breeze touched her cheek lightly, ruffled her hair. Mingled odors from the garden stole up to her; scent of roses, of honeysuckle, of sweet basils and lemon verbena wet from the sprinkling she had given. Her nostrils savored each perfume, found comfort in it . . . Maybe tomorrow, or next week, or after the wedding, she could persuade Guinn to let Lilith go to New York. If only he could understand how dangerous it was to cross her! Will Lundy would help reason with him . . . The wedding was only three weeks away. She was tired, and maybe took an hysterical view of everything . . . And Guinn was so good, he didn't mean to be mulish. In three weeks everything would seem different.

She dozed a little at her window, before she roused to call Pat to go to bed.

"I measure my love to show you,
For we have gained the day!"

hummed the small daughter as she mounted the stair. . . .

Next day Irene was outwardly her serene self again, but apprehension nibbled at her nerves, made her jumpy and alert. Guinn went about with the air, at once conciliatory and jovial, of a man who has had his way but somewhat questions the wisdom of it, though he refuses to change his ruling. Tina was quiet, with a mutinous set to her unsmiling mouth, reproach in her eyes when she was in her father's presence. Lilith wore a slightly ironic smile on her lips that had won back their rich color and soft curves. In the kitchen Sheba brooded over the stove like a voodoo priestess balked in her cunning, but on the watch.

"How queer my household is!" Irene whispered to herself as she cleaned out the bathroom after Pat's splashing. How one day had changed its temper! Yet, after all, what had happened? Guinn had

"'An' you ain't by yo'self in dat, in dat,
An' you ain't by yo'self in dat.'"

she quoted from a darkey song. "But the cards are here, and if we don't send 'em out, we'll not get any presents. Savez?"

Then she called up the stairway: "Lilith, come down and help us address invitations if you feel like it."

Lilith descended the stairs with languorous grace, one sculptured arm gliding down the handrail, the hem of her blue chiffon skirt fluffing out with each step, like the calyx of a flower. The heat had made her yellow hair wavier than ever, and her cheeks were flushed, her eyes full of starry excitement.

"Hello, Dan," she said.

Irene grated her teeth at the sight and the words. Lilith was so—damnably beautiful. Beside her Tina was an unsophisticated little girl. In Lilith's eyes were [illegible]eties, mysteries, allurements, [illegible] her lips were a scarlet challenge. It wasn't fair for Dan's image of Tina to be blurred by the contrast of such beauty. Who knew what delicate difference it might make in his love for Tina?

Dan stood with folded arms and

After supper she heard Tina say to Dan "We have to finish addressing those invitations.

advised Tina and Dan to wait till their proper wedding day, and had told Lilith he wasn't willing for her to go to New York. He'd been perfectly affectionate in both cases. Yet each daughter flaunted a grievance on lip, in eye. The girls ought to remember what tyrants some fathers were—yet the girls were obviously not remembering.

The house had a feeling as if it were secretly mined, and Irene almost looked for trails of gunpowder along the halls, in dark corners. . . . She'd be glad when the wedding was over, even though Tina would be speeding away from her to Paris. Tina would adore Paris. In her fancy she was already reading the child's letters and post cards, excited, rapturous, gay. In a world crammed with disappointments, it was heartening to think of anyone as utterly happy as Tina would be on her honeymoon. Tina didn't love Dan any more than she had loved Guinn. Oh, no, that wasn't possible! But the little girl hadn't had to bear the heartbreak, the wait, the disillusionment as preface to her wedding that she herself had known. Tina's lover hadn't asked her to marry him because of—pot liquor!

Irene gave a wobbly laugh to herself.

With ears preternaturally sharp, she listened for any sound that might hint danger to the household peace; with alert eyes looked for any sign of peril, and called herself a fool to suffer from the "worry blues."

After supper she heard Tina say to Dan: "We have to finish addressing those invitations, Danny."

"I don't want to address invitations. I want to be married now, without 'em." There was boyish sullenness in his tone.

compressed lips, watching Lilith come down the stairway.

Irene stepped forward. "Lilith, if you'd rather drive with your father than address invitations I'll help Dan and Tina."

"Yes, come on and ride with me," Guinn called.

"No, thank you, father. It's too hot to go out. I'll stay and address invitations," she said smoothly.

What was in the look she gave her father — polite defiance, a flicker of malice, mystery or mirth? Oh, Guinn would be made to feel her hardness, now that he refused to do her will! How long would he be able to hold out against her?

He turned away, a hurt look in his eyes. "Come, Patsy, and go with your dad to see old Mrs. Witherspoon."

Pat ran to snatch his hand and skip away beside him.

Scant pleasure Guinn was going to have of Lilith's enforced stay at home. She'd have her own ways of revenge. Poor Guinn!—but then, he had brought it on himself and if he yielded to her demands, she would be nice to him again. . . .

How could that unknown man have withstood her? Irene asked herself. Was he really married, as she had hinted, or was that merely to throw suspicion off the track? Was he back in New York now, or was he in Paris? What would explain the girl's determination to get to Paris? Whoever he was, if he saw her in such heightened beauty, surely he must yield to her spell and marry her. If he wasn't married to someone else, that would be the solution for everything. . . .

BYES WIN GAME UNDER PROTEST

DARKNESS APPEARING AT CRUCIAL TIME OF GAME CAUSES TROUBLE

Just who won the opening kittenball game of the season last evening is a conundrum to many today, as one team claims the honor and the other asserts that the game ended in a tie.

The John M. Bye Clothing Co. did win the game by present indications unless a protest made by the Service Motor Co. reverses it.

The situation was as follows:

The score was 10 to 8 for the John M. Bye team at the close of the fourth inning. Darkness crept on.

Near the close of the second half of the fifth inning the Service Motor boys came through with two runs to tie the score. With a man on third base and none out, the referee called the game.

The rules assert that four innings played constitute a game when such game is called because of darkness or rain.

The Service Motor boys are protesting the decision and there hangs the tale. The matter will likely be decided at the next meeting of the league officials.

Meanwhile the Paul M. Jones team and the Nash-Finch boys will play tonight at the grounds near the water tower.

Some heavy hitting featured the game last night. Otto Heikkinen of the Service Motor met the enlarged pill for two hefty home runs, one of them landing way out of the lot. V. Wunderlich clouted out a beauty for the Byes which resulted in a homer.

DEMPSEY TO BID NEAR MILLION FOR DETROIT OLYMPIA

New York, April 2.—(U.P.)—Jack Dempsey was on his way to Detroit today with authority to make an offer for the Detroit Olympia, an indoor arena similar to Madison Square Garden.

Humbert J. Fugazy, with whom the former heavyweight champion is associated, intimated Dempsey would offer in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

NUISANCE TAXES

DURING the war we all grew accustomed to "nuisance taxes," as they were termed, for money had to be raised to carry on the war. President Coolidge worked valiantly with the aid of congress to do away with these taxes when peace came and the public breathed a sigh of relief as one after another of the measures received a quietus and was relegated to oblivion as a tax measure.

As to income taxes, the government has kindly raised the exemptions and eased the burden on the small taxpayers.

Now with the war over, years ago, and the country on a peace time basis, we find the sovereign state of Minnesota searching nooks and crannies for new sources of taxation.

It finds the legislature jockeying with a cigaret bill, entering wedge for the nuisance taxes. One vote finds the bill killed, another vote reconsiders its death and a third vote in the house passes the bill. It is now up to the senate.

There is now before the house another bill of the nuisance kind and to tax cosmetics, it is said.

A Brainerd man came to the Dispatch today and said: "What would happen in Minnesota if somebody urged the taxing of snuff?" As far as we know that may be in line.

Minnesota, in the past, has set a poor example in the matter of taxation. Take the question of iron taxation. No commodity or business in the state gets a three-ply taxation as does iron ore and the industry which takes it from the ground.

There is first the special classification of iron ore with its percentage of 50 per cent used for assessment, then there is the occupation tax and the royalty tax. These iron ore and iron industry taxes seem to have been levied according to the idea used by the railroad and other common carriers in the old days of charging all that the traffic will stand, and then some.

It's human nature that when a thing has once been established it is hard to make a change, and this applies especially to taxation. Any fair minded man will express wonder when he surveys Minnesota's system of iron taxation.

And now, when the effort is being made to add a nuisance tax to Minnesota's tax structure, success in that effort will make a nuisance tax stick as tightly as do the various inequitable iron taxes.

Another thing about taxes that any student will notice is that a legislature is always more anxious to spend money than to save it. To repeal a tax requires superhuman effort compared with the ordinary effort it takes to create new tax measures.

When Governor Christianson preaches economy and does his very best to carry out that economy it arouses a storm among those who oppose him.

Probably the whole trouble centers among many of the people themselves. So many of us are spending our pay check before we get it.

SAFETY IN CHECKS

ONE of the subjects most prolific in the way of texts for comment is that of the safety provided by banks to persons to engage in financial transactions of any kind. Many more persons should adopt the plan of making payments of all kinds by checks instead of in currency, says the St. Cloud Daily Times.

Every few days the newspapers publish accounts of thefts which have been committed in cases of persons who withdraw sums of money from the banks, or use money they have kept in their homes for payments on property or other transactions.

A bank check eliminates all possibility of loss of money in making payments. Bankers are particular to know that persons presenting checks for payment are entitled to the money, and even if a check is stolen it is highly improbable that it can be negotiated by the thief. Banks require identification before making payment on checks, and the writer of the check can immediately stop payment on it if it is stolen.

Persons who keep money in considerable amounts in the home do so at their own risk. Would-be thieves have means of securing information which may not be suspected by the person who keeps money in his home, or they may even take a chance of finding currency hidden about the house. The resulting loss is the same.

There is no reason why any individual should draw currency from the bank when a check will complete a financial transaction; neither is there any excuse for a person to be his own banker.

UNDER ARCTIC ICE

WE notice that Sir George Hubert Wilkins is to get to the North Pole by submarine. He will navigate on the surface wherever possible and when the ice field gets too thick and impassable he is, according to present plans, to dip under the ice and continue.

This sounds all right and seem probable, but one thing has not been taken into account and that is the amount of ice to be encountered. In cold regions, as the Yukon river territory, old timers have discovered that the ice freezes on the surface of the water and then as the cold grows more intense, the ice forms below in the river bed until the small stream flows through what is practically an ice-enclosed tube, top bottom and sides of the river are ice-encased.

In like manner Sir George Hubert Wilkins may run the nose of his undersea craft into underwater ice barriers and strike a blind alley of ice. The Polar sea has no regular flow like a river. The bottom of the Polar sea is undoubtedly encased in heavy ridges as rough and rugged as the surface ice.

The undertaking of submarine exploration of the North Pole reads good but we fear the difficulties to be encountered may spell the doom of the gallant crew.

DEFECTIVE SIDEWALKS

THERE are sidewalks in this city that are in need of repair. The council last night took a step in the right direction by asking citizens to report to the aldermen of their ward defective walks.

We have in mind several places on the south side where growing trees have pitched the level of the walk in several directions and caused cracks to appear. In other sections of the city walks are off level because they have been built according to different grades.

Citizens should take an inventory of walks in their wards and report promptly to their aldermen.

Impatient Griselda

by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

FOR twenty years Irene Robeline struggled cheerfully along as the wife of Guinn Holden, Texas minister. Beneath a cheery smile was a bruised heart. Irene could never capture Holden's love for his first wife, Lilith, that now was given to his beautiful blonde daughter named after her dead mother. Lilith was spoiled by her adoring father. Tina, his daughter by Irene, a dazzling brunette with Ross, Lundy and Patricia, younger children, all came second in his affections. When Lilith goes to New York for a year's music study she meets her first taste of grief. Falling in love with Bill Chester, she breaks her engagement to a Texas boy. Bill called to Paris by his rich grandfather, cables Lilith that he is marrying Sally Burton, to whom he was engaged. Lilith, shaken with anger and bitterness, learns she is to have a child. Irene and Dr. Lundy secretly care for her in New York to prevent Holden from knowing the truth. After the infant's premature birth and death they return home with Lilith. Happiness prevails as Tina is praparing wedding plans for her marriage to a handsome local lad. They will tour the world on their honeymoon. Irene is torn by happiness for Tina and fear for Lilith's shame becoming known. Lilith slowly recovers—more beautiful than ever and her father's idol. He forbids her return to New York. Likewise he denies Tina permission for an early wedding date.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

SHE sat down on the bench beside him, and laid her cheek against his sleeve. "Oh, Guinn, won't you be guided by my mother instinct just now? I want our two girls to be happy in their own way. Let's let them have their wishes, won't you, darling?"

Tears oozed through her half-closed eyes and wet his sleeve.

He patted her hand. "You're overtired with all this wedding fuss—inclined to be a little hysterical. You'll be all right in three weeks."

"And you won't do it?"

"No. Sorry."

She sprang to her feet. "Guinn Holden, you are acting in an outrageous way! And so—stupid, so blind!"

"Think so?"

"I know it—and if you estrange your daughters from you, don't be surprised."

She fled into the house and up to her room, afraid that if she stayed she might say too much. She sat on a footstool by a window in her room and leaned her head against the sill. The room was in half darkness, the furniture like queer, alien objects, menacing, the trees outside were great blobs of shadow, into which peered the instant, inquiring lights of fireflies, and above in the sky a few pale stars pricked out against the blue gray.

Frogs croaked in a pond near by, their noise drowned out at intervals as a car slithered past with hiss and shriek, as if the car had run over the frogs. In a vacant lot near by a ring of children were playing "We're Marching 'Round the Levee," Pat's treble shrilling above the other voices.

"I measure my love to show you,
I measure my love to show you,
I measure my love to show you,
For we have gained the day!"

A breeze touched her cheek lightly, ruffled her hair. Mingled odors from the garden stole up to her; scent of roses, of honeysuckle, of sweet basils and lemon verbena wet from the sprinkling she had given. Her nostrils savored each perfume, found comfort in it . . . Maybe tomorrow, or next week, or after the wedding, she could persuade Guinn to let Lilith go to New York. If only he could understand how dangerous it was to cross her! Will Lundy would help reason with him . . . The wedding was only three weeks away. She was tired, and maybe took an hysterical view of everything . . . And Guinn was so good, he didn't mean to be mulish. In three weeks everything would seem different.

She dozed a little at her window, before she roused to call Pat to go to bed.

"I measure my love to show you,
For we have gained the day!"

hummed the small daughter as she mounted the stair. . . .

Next day Irene was outwardly her serene self again, but apprehension nibbled at her nerves, made her jumpy and alert. Guinn went about with the air, at once conciliatory and jovial, of a man who has had his way but somewhat questions the wisdom of it, though he refuses to change his ruling. Tina was quiet, with a mutinous set to her unsmiling mouth, reproach in her eyes when she was in her father's presence. Lilith wore a slightly ironic smile on her lips that had won back their rich color and soft curves. In the kitchen Sheba brooded over the stove like a voodoo priestess balked in her cunning, but on the watch.

"How queer my household is!" Irene whispered to herself as she cleaned out the bathroom after Pat's splashing. How one day had changed its temper! Yet, after all, what had happened? Guinn had advised Tina and Dan to wait till their proper wedding day, and had told Lilith he wasn't willing for her to go to New York. He'd been perfectly affectionate in both cases. Yet each daughter flaunted a grievance on lip, in eye. The girls ought to remember what tyrants some fathers were—yet the girls were obviously not remembering.

After supper she heard Tina say to Dan "We have to finish addressing those invitations.

The house had a feeling as if it were secretly mined, and Irene almost looked for trails of gunpowder along the halls, in dark corners. . . . She'd be glad when the wedding was over, even though Tina would be speeding away from her to Paris. Tina would adore Paris. In her fancy she was already reading the child's letters and post cards, excited, rapturous, gay. In a world crammed with disappointments, it was heartening to think of anyone as utterly happy as Tina would be on her honeymoon. Tina didn't love Dan any more than she had loved Guinn. Oh, no, that wasn't possible! But the little girl hadn't had to bear the heartbreak, the wait, the disillusionment as preface to her wedding that she herself had known. Tina's lover hadn't asked her to marry him because of—pot liquor!

Irene gave a wobbly laugh to herself.

With ears preternaturally sharp, she listened for any sound that might hint danger to the household peace; with alert eyes looked for any sign of peril, and called herself a fool to suffer from the "worry blues."

After supper she heard Tina say to Dan: "We have to finish addressing those invitations, Danny."

"I don't want to address invitations. I want to be married now, without 'em." There was boyish sullenness in his tone.

"'An' you ain't by yo'self in dat, in dat,
An' you ain't by yo'self in dat.'"

she quoted from a darkey song. "But the cards are here, and if we don't send 'em out, we'll not get any presents. Savez?"

Then she called up the stairway: "Lilith, come down and help us address invitations if you feel like it."

Lilith descended the stairs with languorous grace, one sculptured arm gliding down the handrail, the hem of her blue chiffon skirt fluffing out with each step, like the calyx of a flower. The heat had made her yellow hair wavier than ever, and her cheeks were flushed, her eyes full of starry excitement.

"Hello, Dan," she said.

Irene grated her teeth at the sight and the words. Lilith was so—damnably beautiful. Beside her Tina was an unsophisticated little girl. In Lilith's eyes were [illegible]eties, mysteries, allurements, [illegible] her lips were a scarlet challenge. It wasn't fair for Dan's image of Tina to be blurred by the contrast of such beauty. Who knew what delicate difference it might make in his love for Tina?

Dan stood with folded arms and compressed lips, watching Lilith come down the stairway.

Irene stepped forward. "Lilith, if you'd rather drive with your father than address invitations I'll help Dan and Tina."

"Yes, come on and ride with me," Guinn called.

"No, thank you, father. It's too hot to go out. I'll stay and address invitations," she said smoothly.

What was in the look she gave her father — polite defiance, a flicker of malice, mystery or mirth? Oh, Guinn would be made to feel her hardness, now that he refused to do her will! How long would he be able to hold out against her?

He turned away, a hurt look in his eyes. "Come, Patsy, and go with your dad to see old Mrs. Witherspoon."

Pat ran to snatch his hand and skip away beside him.

Scant pleasure Guinn was going to have of Lilith's enforced stay at home. She'd have her own ways of revenge. Poor Guinn!—but then, he had brought it on himself and if he yielded to her demands, she would be nice to him again. . . .

How could that unknown man have withstood her? Irene asked herself. Was he really married, as she had hinted, or was that merely to throw suspicion off the track? Was he back in New York now, or was he in Paris? What would explain the girl's determination to get to Paris? Whoever he was, if he saw her in such heightened beauty, surely he must yield to her spell and marry her. If he wasn't married to someone else, that would be the solution for everything. . . .

BYES WIN GAME UNDER PROTEST

DARKNESS APPEARING AT CRUCIAL TIME OF GAME CAUSES TROUBLE

Just who won the opening kittenball game of the season last evening is a conundrum to many today, as one team claims the honor and the other asserts that the game ended in a tie.

The John M. Bye Clothing Co. did win the game by present indications unless a protest made by the Service Motor Co. reverses it.

The situation was as follows:

The score was 10 to 8 for the John M. Bye team at the close of the fourth inning. Darkness crept on.

Near the close of the second half of the fifth inning the Service Motor boys came through with two runs to tie the score. With a man on third base and none out, the referee called the game.

The rules assert that four innings played constitute a game when such game is called because of darkness or rain.

The Service Motor boys are protesting the decision and there hangs the tale. The matter will likely be decided at the next meeting of the league officials.

Meanwhile the Paul M. Jones team and the Nash-Finch boys will play tonight at the grounds near the water tower.

Some heavy hitting featured the game last night. Otto Heikkinen of the Service Motor met the enlarged pill for two hefty home runs, one of them landing way out of the lot. V. Wunderlich clouted out a beauty for the Byes which resulted in a homer.

DEMPSEY TO BID NEAR MILLION FOR DETROIT OLYMPIA

New York, April 2.—(U.P.)—Jack Dempsey was on his way to Detroit today with authority to make an offer for the Detroit Olympia, an indoor arena similar to Madison Square Garden.

Humbert J. Fuguzy, with whom the former heavyweight champion is associated, intimated Dempsey would offer in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

DEFECTIVE WALKS TO RECEIVE ATTENTION

Home Owners to Report All Sidewalks Not in Good Repair to Aldermen of Ward

CONSIDERS TRUCK PURCHASE

Council Refers Request for 3100 Feet Sewer to Aldermen of Third Ward

Defective sidewalks throughout the city came under consideration of the city council last evening, the last meeting of the council before election and the second last meeting of the present council.

Desiring to secure information as to the various walks where repair has become a necessity the council asked the cooperation of city residents in requesting that any complaints of defective walks be made to the aldermen of the respective wards.

Aldermen from the various wards will report all defects to the city engineer and the city council. The repair work may be authorized at the next meeting of the council or it may be left over to the new council.

The resolution to investigate all sidewalks was made by Aldermen Ernest Ritari and W. J. Hall and carried the unanimous support of the council.

City Engineer R. T. Campbell reported that he had made a survey of the ground affected by the proposed new sewer on Fourth and Fifth avenues north of Ash avenue in the vicinity of I street. The survey showed that 3100 feet of sewer would be necessary for the construction, the cost to be $1.25 per lineal foot. Seventy two lots of 50 feet each would be affected, the assessment on each lot to amount to $55, Mr. Campbell reported.

Aldermen of the third ward were instructed to investigate the need of the proposed sewer and the attitude of the lot owners affected by the proposed work. These aldermen will report back to the city council at its next meeting.

On motion of Aldermen Martin Anderson and W. J. Hall, the city clerk was instructed to advertise for bids for a two and three ton truck, bids to be opened at the next meeting of the city council.

On motion of Aldermen R. H. Paine and V. F. Anderson, $225 was ordered transferred from the general fund to the library fund for the purpose of repairing the Brainerd Public Library.

Mrs. W. C. Rasch, president of the Library Board who made the request stated that the board contemplated the painting of the roof and the redecorating of the inside of the building.

On motion of Aldermen C. G. Holmstrom and Ernest Ritari the City Water and Light Board were authorized to purchase a new truck at the cost of $588.

The request for permission to purchase the truck was made by W. D. McKay, secretary of the water and light department who stated that a second truck was necessary for the department and that the board had already approved its purchase subject to the approval of the city council.

The financial report of the Brainerd Public Library showed a balance on hand as of April 1 of $265.42. This balance however will be augmented to approximately $900 with the receiving of the March settlement.

George P. Stein was granted a renewal of his taxi cab license, his request being accompanied by a check for $40, the cost of the license.

The request of George Wicks for a taxi license was also granted subject to the approval of the mayor and the police committee.

The request of Harry Perlman for a renewal of a junk dealers license was granted. His request was accompanied by a check for $25, the cost of the license.

The Park Board's financial report showed a balance on hand of $142.38 with debts outstanding, $406.52. The announcement was made however that the Park Board was considering the renting of Lum Park concessions this summer which rental would bring in $600. The report was referred to the finance committee for checking.

The request of Walter P. Tyrholm for permission to construct a picket fence on property, the northeast corner of 7th and Maple streets was granted. Aldermen Holmstrom, Martin Anderson and Paine opposed the resolution on the grounds that the picket fence would constitute a hazard.

The request of the Crawford Motor Sales to construct a drive in filling station at their garage on Front and Fifth streets was granted subject to the approval of the city engineer.

The city engineer was instructed to repair the washout on Norwood street between 9th and 10th streets.

The council voted not to pay the claim of Harry O'Brien in the amount of approximately $40 because in the belief of the council the claim was not presented to the city within the specified 30 days.

The claim was on outcome of a few months back when Mr. O'Brien claimed he damaged his car by striking an elevated manhole on H street.

The council instructed the city engineer to have all stand pipes on city sidewalks cut down flush with the walks.

A warning was ordered issued to all motorists and truck drivers to observe the city ordinance in respect to cutouts on cars and trucks.

Brainerd Radio Club Works for Better Reception; Minneapolis Man Finds Trouble

Interference, that humdrum obstacle, the bane to every radio owner's existence, has received a severe blow in Brainerd and everything points to a knockout in favor of better radio reception if the plan now being worked by the Brainerd Radio club materializes.

Lester Parks, of the Finlay Electric Co., an expert in discovering causes for interference has already located a great deal of the trouble.

However the financial status of the club is such that funds will be depleted within a day unless restocked. Those interested in this worthwhile work are invited to contribute to a fund to take care of expenses in doing away with interference. Those desiring to assist should make their contributions to Dr. A. K. Cohen.

It is the belief that Mr. Parks can practically eliminate interference in the city to radio reception. Already one of the greatest troubles has been located and will be remedied this week.

Brainerd Radio Club Works for Better Reception; Minneapolis Man Finds Trouble

Interference, that humdrum obstacle, the bane to every radio owner's existence, has received a severe blow in Brainerd and everything points to a knockout in favor of better radio reception if the plan now being worked by the Brainerd Radio club materializes.

Lester Parks, of the Finlay Electric Co., an expert in discovering causes for interference has already located a great deal of the trouble.

However the financial status of the club is such that funds will be depleted within a day unless restocked. Those interested in this worthwhile work are invited to contribute to a fund to take care of expenses in doing away with interference. Those desiring to assist should make their contributions to Dr. A. K. Cohen.

It is the belief that Mr. Parks can practically eliminate interference in the city to radio reception. Already one of the greatest troubles has been located and will be remedied this week.

Goodness Doubly Assured

Deeds, not words, build a good name! The name of Dodge Brothers stands for endurance, trustworthiness, long life. Its reputation for dependability rests on a solid and unshakable foundation of years of honest motor car manufacture. The name of Walter P. Chrysler stands for style, for engineering leadership and integrity. His genius has been proved by a long succession of achievements that have virtually revolutionized motor car construction and design. That is why the new Dodge Brothers Six is so outstanding in character and behavior. The sturdiness so long associated with Dodge Brothers cars is a guarantee of its stamina. Its vivid style and spirited performance typify it as a Chrysler creation.

N. Y. GIANTS ARE FAVORITES IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

VETERAN BASEBALL CORRESPONDENTS RECORD THEIR IMPRESSIONS

GIANTS AND NOT CUBS ARE THE FAVORITES OF THE WRITERS

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

New York, April 2.—After watching the major league clubs in training for more than a month several veteran baseball correspondents have made observations on the National League pennant race which are interesting just at this time.

The New York Giants and not the Chcago Cubs are the favorites with the writers to win the pennant.

The St. Louis Cardinals, 1928 champions, will drop as low as fourth place in the opnion of three prominent scribes who believe the left side of the infield will keep the Cards down.

A Pittsburgh writer who has followed the ups and downs of the Pirates for many seasons isn't enthusiastic over the prospects of Donie Bush's 1929 club.

"The Pirates have their best pitching staff in years," he writes, "but the infield is a real problem and the outfield is in pretty bad shape with Paul Waner still out of the fold."

There seems to be no dispute among these baseball scriveners about which clubs belong in the first division. Almost without exception they have named the Giants, Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals for first division and the Reds, Robins, Braves and Phillies for second division.

Brooklyn and Boston are, in the opinion of most of the National League writers, the worst clubs in the league now.

Many of the scribes look for the Phillies to show improvement, principally because of a high-class infield.

One writer believes that the only two clubs weaker than last year are the Cardinals and Braves.

Another thinks the Giants have the best pitching staff in the league and that Benton and Hubbell will win 25 games each.

The Reds have failed to impress many scribes, but some of them think Jack Hendricks' club may make trouble if the Reds' pitching staff gets to hitting on all cylinders.

TRAINING CAMP NOTES

Beaumont, Tex., April 2.—(U.P.)—Good pitching by Pat Malone and Charley Root gave the Chicago Cubs a 6-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Malone allowed only two hits in six innings and a like number were garnered off Root. The pitching exhibition was a great source of satisfaction to Manager McCarthy of the Cubs who had been worried about his hurlers.

McKinney, Tex., April 2.—(U.P.)—Sixteen base hits and twelve walks allowed the Chicago White Sox to defeat the McKinney high school team 21-4. Nicholas, McKinney's star pitcher held the Sox in the first two innings but was withdrawn because of an important prep game today.

Miami, Fla., April 2.—(U.P.)—Glenn Wright is back in the lineup of the Brooklyn Robins. He made his appearance at second base yesterday against the Boston Braves, accepting five chances in the five innings he played.

Columbia, S. C., April 2.—(U.P.)—Ossie Orwoll fielded well at first yesterday against Jacksonville and pounded out a triple, double and sacrifice fly, while the Athletics were winning 9 to 3.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 2.—(U.P.)—Continuing their exhibition games against minor league teams, the St. Louis Cardinals arrived today to meet Jacksonville. Eddie Delker's work at third base yesterday against Tris Speaker's Newark club drew praise from Manager Billy Southworth.

FORTY HIGH SCHOOL CAGE TEAMS PLAY

SCHEDULE IN NATIONAL PLAY AT CHICAGO CALLS FOR 12 GAMES TODAY

REMAINING FIRST ROUND ENCOUNTERS ARE TO BE HELD TOMORROW

By BERT DEMBY

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, April 2. — Forty high school basketball teams, representing 33 states scattered between the Rockies and the Appalachians, began play today in the University of Chicago eleventh annual national interscholastic tournament.

The schedule called for 12 games today and the remaining first round encounters tomorrow. Second round play between the 20 survivors starts Thursday. Simultaneously, a consolation tourney, between the teams which were eliminated in the first round, will begin.

Enlivened by the greatest "color" the meet has known, the tournament was expected to bring out the best of America's high school basketball. The entries presented a striking contrast as they arrived. There was the Winnemucca, Nevada outfit, which came in hair pants, spurs, wide-brimmed hats and shirts of various hues.

The contrast to this came from the east in a team dressed in spats, derbies and that quiet scheme of colors which smacks of sophistication.

The national champions of the past two years, Ashland, Ky., in 1928 and Morton High of Cicero in 1927, are back to defend their honors.

The Winnemucca team's arrival was the occasion for some excitement. Reports said one of Winnemucca's public-spirited citizens had heard about Chicago's machine gun front and decided to obtain protection for the team.

Mayor Thompson sent four motorcycle policemen to meet the Nevada boys and the team was convoyed to Bartlett gymnasium safe and sound.

Among the favored entries are Athens, Texas; Vienna, Ga.; Johnston City, L.; St. Paul, Neb.; Winnemucca, Nev., and Heath, Ky. The Georgians were looked upon as a particularly strong outfit.

Play started at ten o'clock this morning and will finish at ten tonight.

Barlett Gymnasium, Chicago, Apr. 2.—Five points in the final 1 ½ minutes of play allowed the Raton, N. M., team to win 24 to 23 over Portsmouth, N. H., in the opening game of the University of Chicago's national interscholastic basketball tournament today.

With his team trailing 23 to 18, Krueger, Raton center, scored two field goals and a free throw in less than two minutes. Raton had trailed most of the way.

Wheeler, Miss., experienced little trouble defeating Winnemucca, Nevada, 39 to 9. The westerners were outclassed and the result never was in doubt.

Mobile, Ala., April 2.—(U.P.)—Babe Ruth started hitting here yesterday when he collected three safeties in the New York Yankees' 3 to 1 victory over the Mobile Southern League club. The Yankees left immediately after the game for Houston, Tex., where they were scheduled to meet the Pittsburgh Pirates today.

Atlanta, Ga., April 2.—(U.P.)—The Cincinnati Reds practice here today. Jack Hendricks refused to allow the Reds to go through with an exhibition game yesterday against the Macon club of the Sally league because he thought the ball park, still under construction, was not a safe place for a major league ball club to perform.

Bradenton, Fla., April 2.—(U.P.)—The Boston Red Sox, collected 18 hits yesterday against Buffalo including home runs by Regan and Bigelow, and won 14 to 6.

Tampa, Fla., April 2—(U.P.)—Archie Campbell and Ad Liska, rookie pitchers, held Tampa to two hits yesterday, the Senators winning, 7 to 2.

The 1929 Oldsmobile is winning even greater admiration from owners, because it is

DESIGNED TO DO ALL THINGS WELL

It is a relatively simple engineering task to design a car that emphasizes only a few qualities at the sacrifice of others. It is an engineering achievement, however, to combine all desirable qualities to an outstanding degree in a balanced whole. Yet that is exactly what Oldsmobile engineers have done in the new 1929 Oldsmobile.

You have only to drive it to realize what brilliant all-round performance it provides. Its big high-compression engine now delivers 62 horsepower. And the piston pins are pressure-lubricated, a feature formerly characteristic of high-priced automobiles.

In appearance, this finer Oldsmobile is as beautiful and as smart as any car on automobile row. Its grace of line—its perfection of detail—its harmony of color—all bespeak the artistry of Fisher craftsmanship.

The interiors are luxuriously appointed and richly upholstered . . . they are roomy and restful as well. And the new Fisher adjustable front seat, combined with Oldsmobile's adjustable steering wheel, assures a comfortable driving position.

There seems to be no dispute among these baseball scriveners about which clubs belong in the first division. Almost without exception they have named the Giants, Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals for first division and the Reds, Robins, Braves and Phillies for second division.

Brooklyn and Boston are, in the opinion of most of the National League writers, the worst clubs in the league now.

Many of the scribes look for the Phillies to show improvement, principally because of a high-class infield.

One writer believes that the only two clubs weaker than last year are the Cardinals and Braves.

Another thinks the Giants have the best pitching staff in the league and that Benton and Hubbell will win 25 games each.

The Reds have failed to impress many scribes, but some of them think Jack Hendricks' club may make trouble if the Reds' pitching staff gets to hitting on all cylinders.

TRAINING CAMP NOTES

Beaumont, Tex., April 2.—(U.P.)—Good pitching by Pat Malone and Charley Root gave the Chicago Cubs a 6-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Malone allowed only two hits in six innings and a like number were garnered off Root. The pitching exhibition was a great source of satisfaction to Manager McCarthy of the Cubs who had been worried about his hurlers.

McKinney, Tex., April 2.—(U.P.)—Sixteen base hits and twelve walks allowed the Chicago White Sox to defeat the McKinney high school team 21-4. Nicholas, McKinney's star pitcher held the Sox in the first two innings but was withdrawn because of an important prep game today.

Miami, Fla., April 2.—(U.P.)—Glenn Wright is back in the lineup of the Brooklyn Robins. He made his appearance at second base yesterday against the Boston Braves, accepting five chances in the five innings he played.

Columbia, S. C., April 2.—(U.P.)—Ossie Orwoll fielded well at first yesterday against Jacksonville and pounded out a triple, double and sacrifice fly, while the Athletics were winning 9 to 3.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 2.—(U.P.)—Continuing their exhibition games against minor league teams, the St. Louis Cardinals arrived today to meet Jacksonville. Eddie Delker's work at third base yesterday against Tris Speaker's Newark club drew praise from Manager Billy Southworth.

FORTY HIGH SCHOOL CAGE TEAMS PLAY

SCHEDULE IN NATIONAL PLAY AT CHICAGO CALLS FOR 12 GAMES TODAY

REMAINING FIRST ROUND ENCOUNTERS ARE TO BE HELD TOMORROW

By BERT DEMBY

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, April 2. — Forty high school basketball teams, representing 33 states scattered between the Rockies and the Appalachians, began play today in the University of Chicago eleventh annual national interscholastic tournament.

The schedule called for 12 games today and the remaining first round encounters tomorrow. Second round play between the 20 survivors starts Thursday. Simultaneously, a consolation tourney, between the teams which were eliminated in the first round, will begin.

Enlivened by the greatest "color" the meet has known, the tournament was expected to bring out the best of America's high school basketball. The entries presented a striking contrast as they arrived. There was the Winnemucca, Nevada outfit, which came in hair pants, spurs, wide-brimmed hats and shirts of various hues.

The contrast to this came from the east in a team dressed in spats, derbies and that quiet scheme of colors which smacks of sophistication.

The national champions of the past two years, Ashland, Ky., in 1928 and Morton High of Cicero in 1927, are back to defend their honors.

The Winnemucca team's arrival was the occasion for some excitement. Reports said one of Winnemucca's public-spirited citizens had heard about Chicago's machine gun front and decided to obtain protection for the team.

Mayor Thompson sent four motorcycle policemen to meet the Nevada boys and the team was convoyed to Bartlett gymnasium safe and sound.

Among the favored entries are Athens, Texas; Vienna, Ga.; Johnston City, I..; St. Paul, Neb.; Winnemucca, Nev., and Heath, Ky. The Georgians were looked upon as a particularly strong outfit.

Play started at ten o'clock this morning and will finish at ten tonight.

Barlett Gymnasium, Chicago, Apr. 2.—Five points in the final 1 ½ minutes of play allowed the Raton, N. M., team to win 24 to 23 over Portsmouth, N. H., in the opening game of the University of Chicago's national interscholastic basketball tournament today.

With his team trailing 23 to 18, Krueger, Raton center, scored two field goals and a free throw in less than two minutes. Raton had trailed most of the way.

Wheeler, Miss., experienced little trouble defeating Winnemucca, Nevada, 39 to 9. The westerners were outclassed and the result never was in doubt.

Mobile, Ala., April 2.—(U.P.)—Babe Ruth started hitting here yesterday when he collected three safeties in the New York Yankees' 3 to 1 victory over the Mobile Southern League club. The Yankees left immediately after the game for Houston, Tex., where they were scheduled to meet the Pittsburgh Pirates today.

Atlanta, Ga., April 2.—(U.P.)—The Cincinnati Reds practice here today. Jack Hendricks refused to allow the Reds to go through with an exhibition game yesterday against the Macon club of the Sally league because he thought the ball park, still under constructon, was not a safe place for a major league ball club to perform.

Bradenton, Fla., April 2.—(U.P.)—The Boston Red Sox, collected 18 hits yesterday against Buffalo including home runs by Regan and Bigelow, and won 14 to 6.

The 1929 Oldsmobile is winning even greater admiration from owners, because it is

DESIGNED TO DO ALL THINGS WELL

It is a relatively simple engineering task to design a car that emphasizes only a few qualities at the sacrifice of others. It is an engineering achievement, however, to combine all desirable qualities to an outstanding degree in a balanced whole. Yet that is exactly what Oldsmobile engineers have done in the new 1929 Oldsmobile.

You have only to drive it to realize what brilliant all-round performance it provides. Its big high-compression engine now delivers 62 horsepower. And the piston pins are pressure-lubricated, a feature formerly characteristic of high-priced automobiles.

In appearance, this finer Oldsmobile is as beautiful and as smart as any car on automobile row. Its grace of line—its perfection of detail—its harmony of color—all bespeak the artistry of Fisher craftsmanship.

The interiors are luxuriously appointed and richly upholstered . . . they are roomy and restful as well. And the new Fisher adjustable front seat, combined with Oldsmobile's adjustable steering wheel, assures a comfortable driving position.
